Soviet Parley Awaits Stalin O.K. on Edict Of Roosevelt

President Is Determined on Discussion Before Recognition.

Fate of Proposal Is Up to Moscow

Conference Is Delayed Until Litvinoff Gets Answer.

By Kendall Foss.

The fate of the Soviet recognition discussions was in Moscow's hands last night.

Joseph Stalin has to decide whether to cling to the time-honored Soviet thesis that recognition always must come first and discussion of outstanding points afterward, or to yield to the Roosevelt intention to make recognition dependent on the outcome of the discussions.

Despite official secrecy, it became clear that this is the explanation of the long interval since Litvinoff's last meeting with President Roosevelt Sunday evening.

Waits for Answer.

The gap is not because the President can not find time for Litvinoff; it is because Litvinoff must await an answer from the Kremlin before he can profitably visit either the White House or the State Department again.

There is no evidence that any one point is proving a snag. The general thesis is sufficient to account for the delay for there are highly important implications wrapped up in the seemingly innocent proposition: recognition before discussion, versus recognition dependent upon discussion.

President Roosevelt made himself entirely clear in his letter to Kalinin. He intends to have discussion first.

By sending Litvinoff in response to the President's invitation, the Soviet Union tacitly accepted this thesis.

Yet, according to the Associated Press, the Moscow papers yesterday issued grave warnings to the effect that this would never do. Many an observer would like to know whether this is a bluff or the beginning of the end as far as recognition is concerned. When the Soviet press prints such a warning it is because the government wants it printed.

Cause to Hesitate.

The Kremlin has good cause to hesitate. Of course, it is not discussion pure and simple that hurts; it is the business of agreeing to things, even in principle, as the price of recognition.

Among other items that may well be causing the Soviet government to hesitate is a possible American demand that the pre-Soviet Russian debts be admitted. If the debt to

U. S. Fleet Sails To War Games

Big Pacific Mimic Battle Nears With Planes Taking Part.

Aboard U. S. Cruiser Chester, off the California Coast, Nov. 14 (AP). Bound for a secret rendezvous, the bulk of American seapower today is moving off the California Coast for one of the thrilling events of the Navy year.

A tactical problem involving one of the vital tests of the proficiency of Naval defense of the United States is involved.

Submarines, cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carrier squadrons are moving seaward, from Southern California bases, bent on a mission of crippling a superior force coming in from the sea convoying a theoretical expeditionary force.

Battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers are moving to sea from San Francisco to take up a position as this attacking force, known as the Blue fleet.

Sunnyvale, Calif., Nov. 14 (AP). The dirigible Macon left her base here today to participate in the Naval war games off the California Coast. She carried her regular crew and officers of the fleet. She is due to return Friday.

Man Held in Plot On Miami Mayor

Miami, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—An alleged plot to kill Mayor E. G. Sewell and City Commissioner A. D. H. Fossey was disclosed today with the arrest of Henry M. Brown, automobile body worker.

Brown, former elevator operator in the courthouse, was arrested on information furnished by County Solicitor Fred W. Pine following a lengthy investigation.

He was charged with conspiracy against the lives of Mayor Sewell and Fossey in an alleged scheme to lure them to the outskirts of the city, hit them in the head with a rubber mallet, weight the bodies with rocks and dump them in a canal.

Political Topics Banned at White House Call; Raskob Present.

Over their tea cups, in a second floor study of the White House, President Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith last evening had their first intimate chat since the former's election to the Presidency.

They talked of their grandchildren, of Mr. Roosevelt's forthcoming vacation at Warm Springs, of the visitor's installation as a trustee of Catholic University, even of the weather. But they never did get around to the subject of New York City politics, or any other kind.

This seemingly irrelevant tea table talk was not, however, without significance for political observers who have been watching for a possible Roosevelt-Smith rapprochement to take over control

Il Duce Aims To End Rule Of Deputies

Abolishment of Chamber Plan of Mussolini; Hits Capitalism.

Rome, Nov. 14 (AP).—In what was called the funeral oration of capitalism and liberal institutions, Premier Mussolini today forecast abolishment of the Italian Chamber of Deputies.

Speaking before the National Council of Corporations he advanced a program by which nations could acquire cooperative states. The chamber, he said, would be elected as usual next spring for a term of five years.

Afterward, he want on, that legislative body must decide its own fate. It is conceivable that the National Council of Corporations should supplant the chamber, Il Duce said.

"The Chamber of Deputies has never pleased me," he explained.

Cites Insull Case.

The premier denounced capitalism and named Ivar Krueger, the late match king, and Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities operator, as representatives of this system.

The Council of Corporations, as the chief body of the corporative system, Il Duce said, must become a substitute for the chamber. The proposed reform will not be made immediately because there is insufficient time before the march elections which, therefore, will be conducted as usual.

Turning to European affairs, Mussolini said the growth of the United States and Japan meant the eclipse of Europe.

Europe he added, "could still progress if it would display even the least possible quantity of co-

Sinclair Calls Senate Stock Inquiry 'Joke'

Can Not Explain $300,000 Gift to Competitor of Oil Pool.

Harry F. Sinclair, oil operator, and promoter of what investigators termed a "Santa Claus syndicate" in the stock of his own company, yesterday called the Senate's Wall street investigation a "joke."

Testifying before the Senate Banking Committee, Sinclair denied knowing why a $300,000 "gift" was made to an oil competitor from syndicate profits, then expressed amusement at the committee's inquiry.

A few minutes later he retracted part of his statement. He said he was thinking of testimony by Arthur Cutten, Chicago trader, and manager of the 1928-29 Sinclair Consolidated Oil stock pool, who last week gave the committee scant information.

"My idea of what I thought was a joke was Cutten's testimony, not your meeting," Sinclair said. "I should like to have that cancelled from the record."

Pecora Bars Retraction.

Counsel Ferdinand Pecora insisted the reference be left in the record.

"A great many people thought the Teapot Dome investigation was a joke, but I hope that sentiment doesn't extend to this inquiry," interposed Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan.

"It was a joke," said Pecora, "but I don't know yet whom the joke was on."

Sinclair in 1929 served six months in jail for contempt of the Senate and contempt of court in refusing to answer questions and shadowing a jury in the Teapot Dome case.

William S. Fitzpatrick, vice chairman of the Consolidated Oil Corporation board and former president of the Prairie Oil & Pipe Line Co., today will be asked why he received 2½ per cent of the $12,000,000 Sinclair pool profits when he was not a participant in the pool.

Sinclair could not explain why the $300,000 went to Fitzpatrick, al-

Edward N. Hurley, Ship Board Chairman During War, Dies

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Edward N. Hurley, 69, the man commissioned by President Woodrow Wilson "to go the limit" as wartime chairman of the United States Shipping Board to get American troops and supplies to France, died unexpectedly from pneumonia, tonight.

First word of the illness of the prominent manufacturer and financier came this afternoon when he was transferred on a stretcher from his Lake Shore Drive home to a hospital.

Mr. Hurley returned from Miami Beach, Fla., a few days ago after contracting a cold and had kept to his bed. But his illness was not regarded as serious until word came of his removal to the hospital.

Successful in nearly all endeavors he attempted, Mr. Hurley came to the National notice first as a member of the Federal Trade Commission in 1913, later becoming its chairman. Because of private business demands he resigned from Government service in February, 1917, only to be called back again a few months later by President Wilson to head the Shipping Board.

America then was at war. There was the greatest need to speed men and supplies to allied forces. President Wilson summoned his new shipping chief and said: "Hurley, we must go the limit." And go the limit he did.

How he succeeded was summarized in a letter he received from President Wilson after Mr. Hurley completed his work.

Mr. Hurley, the President wrote, "served the country with distinction in these difficult times. No one ever served his country's interests more devotedly than you did, and personally I am deeply grateful to you."

Mr. Hurley also received the Distinguished Service medal, the honor being conferred upon him for "ex-

20 Governors To Plan Jobs For 4 Million

500 State, Local Officials Confer Here Today on Work-Relief.

Roosevelt Will Outline Steps for Spending $400,000,000.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Perhaps the largest gathering of governors, mayors and other State and municipal officials ever to assemble will meet here today to participate with President Roosevelt and Federal authorities in launching the new relief program to put 4,000,000 men to work during the next month.

Harry L. Hopkins, in his new capacity as civil work administrator, will lay before about 500 State and local officials the work-relief plan and the regulations which will govern the spending of $400,000,000 of the Public Works Administration fund during the next four months in President Roosevelt's effort to get approximately 10,000,000 persons off relief rolls and on a sustaining basis that will restore their self-respect.

Hear President.

Later in the day President Roosevelt will greet the conferees in the east room of the White House and personally outline to them the plan he has proposed, what he expects to achieve and what he expects the State and local authorities to do to make it a success.

Attaches in Mr. Hopkins' office said that 20 governors, about 150 mayors and about 300 other officials, including representatives of local relief administration groups, had indicated their intention to attend today's meeting at the Mayflower. Seldom has as many as 20 State chief executives attended any of the annual conferences of governors.

One of the purposes of the meeting is to acquaint the responsible local authorities with the methods formulated for spending the $400,000,000 public works money. The regulations to be announced have been designed to safeguard the spending of this money from waste either through graft or political machinations.

The relief-work program will be under supervision of a "civil works administration" that will be set up in each city and county. These supervisory units in the majority of instances will be composed of persons now in charge of unemployment relief work and the spending of Federal relief funds.

Purpose Explained.

The plan contemplates that the $400,000,000 public works money, distributed at the rate of about $100,000,000 monthly, and supplemented by sums from State, county and municipal sources now being used for so-called "made-work" projects and other relief money, be used to employ jobless men for 30 hours a week on worthwhile projects at a rate of wages prevailing in the community.

Projects on which the unem-

Diva Divorces Prince Serge

Noble Experiment, Says Mary McCormic, of Wedded Role.

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 (AP).—Another "Marrying Mdivani," Prince Serge, of the Soviet province of Georgia, "struck out" in the American matrimonial game today.

He was divorced by Mary McCormic, opera singer.

Serge did not appear in court. This is his second "strike-out." He married Pola Negri, film actress, in 1925, but she divorced him in Paris in 1931.

Only a few weeks ago, Mae Murry, another film actress, divorced Serge's brother, Prince David, here. The other member of the noble trio, Alexis, is married to Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress. He was divorced a few years ago by Louise Astor Van Allen, of New York.

Jauntily attired, Miss McCormic took the stand today and told the judge her marriage was "a noble experiment, but it didn't work out."

In other days, both she and Miss Negri described Prince Serge as the "world's greatest lover," but today the singer said he struck her, threatened to maim her and called her "terrible names." Some of these she repeated to the judge.

She said she footed all the household bills and that Serge never supported her.

"He didn't want me to have any friends," she testified. "He said I must remember I was a princess and could not associate with common people."

In this connection, Mrs. Carrie Doran, friend of the singer, testified that Prince Serge once told Miss McCormic that she, the singer, was beneath his station in life.

"I'll say he did!" was Miss McCormic's answer to her lawyer's query as to whether the prince ever abused her.

She said he locked her in the bathroom of their apartment in a Beverly Hills Hotel one time and took the keys to her automobile so she could not keep an engagement.

Miss McCormic's suit originally was for separate maintenance, but before court opened today, her lawyer, Michael Luddy, changed it to ask divorce.

DAVID M. ROLL, who yesterday was arrested by Department of Justice agents on swindle charges.

Shoals Lease Fraud Bared Here, Charge

Henry Ford's Name Used by David M. Roll, Say Justice Agents.

Use of Henry Ford's name in an alleged swindle by which $60,000 was mulcted from Washingtonians on the pretense that it was for the purchase of an interest in a lease of Muscle Shoals may require Ford's presence here on November 28 when David M. Roll is given a hearing on a charge of false pretenses.

Roll is alleged to have represented to many prominent Washingtonians that he was the agent of Ford to negotiate with the Government for lease of Muscle Shoals for $80,000,000. By exhibiting the so-called contract, Roll is alleged to have obtained loans on the basis of the commissions which would accrue to him and also other money was advanced to him as interest in the lease.

Freed Under Bond.

The alleged swindler, who has served five years in the Colorado State Penitentiary on swindle charges, was arrested in the Shoreham Hotel yesterday by Department of Justice Agents Louis Loehl and E. M. Black. He was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and released in $25,000 bond.

In the last year he is alleged to have received $59,920 from former Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma; $2,000 from Ward Maylor and $4,000 from J. H. Wooten for interest or loans in his alleged contract with Ford. Department of Justice indicated the amount of the alleged swindle may reach $250,000 to $300,000.

Forgeries Charged.

In the papers, he is alleged to have exhibited to his victims, Roll represented that he was to receive a commission running into the millions if he negotiated the lease, while if he failed, he was to be paid $250,000. The agents found in his possession letters and telgrams, purportedly signed by Ford, which have been characterized as "outright forgeries," by J. Edgar Hoover, directeor of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Several of the persons approached by Roll became suspicious and notified Mr. Hoover, who ordered an investigation. Inquiries made of Henry Ford and his son, Edsel Ford, brought denials that either of them had entered into any contract with Roll.

Students Boo NRA Attack by Schall

Senator Assails Program at Minnesota U.

Minneapolis, Nov. 14 (AP).—Senator Thomas D. Schall was booed by a University of Minnesota audience today as he gave an address attacking the national recovery program.

The Republican Senator from Minnesota first encountered some audience disapproval when he made a reference to "Frankenstein Roosevelt" in talking about war debts which he said the President was canceling. Another outburst came when he said Lincoln and Washington would "turn over in their graves" at NRA activities, which he asserted were being pushed "with the Government controlling the newspapers, radio and movies."

He stopped and then said "oh, I know it's hard, boys, but you've got to hear the truth."

Thereafter he was not interrupted.

Suit Asks $50,000 For Woman's Slip On Bean in Store

Declaring she was injured when she slipped on a string bean while purchasing groceries, Nellie C. Bunch yesterday filed suit for $50,000 against the Sanitary Grocery Co., Riverdale, Md.

The suit was filed with the Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro. Walter C. Green is defense attorney.

Senate Query Halts for Day In Near Riot

Crowd Boos Contempt Order; Broussard Quits Hearing.

'Liar' Cry Raised as Long Tells of Dummy Candidates.

New Orleans, Nov. 14 (AP).—Angry exchanges and shouted vilification that citations for contempt failed to curb, today turned the second day's hearing of the special United States Senate subcommittee investigation of Senator John H. Overton's election into a near riot.

Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, and Elbert Thomas (Democrat), Utah, composing the subcommittee, were powerless to control outbursts of the crowd, which reached fighting pitch when Senator Edward Rightor, counsel for former Senator Edwin Broussard, instigator of the investigation, withdrew with his client with the statement they had lost confidence in the committee.

"We have lost all confidence in this committee, including Chairman Connally (Democrat), Texas, and excluding Senator Thomas, and we withdraw from the investigation," said Mr. Rightor as he paced back and forth before the rostrum shaking his fist. "This investigation has degenerated into an effort to purify Huey Long and whitewash this investigation."

Counsel Ordered Out.

"Get out from in front of this committee and stay away from here," shouted Senator Logan, acting chairman. "You will not be recognized further by this committee. You have nothing to do with it."

The crowd of men and women applauded and yelled, and Francis Williams, an anti-Long political leader, jumped up to demand recognition.

He got instead a citation for contempt along with Mr. Rightor. Senator Logan said they would be cited for contempt to the full committee which would decide if they would be brought before the bar of the United States Senate.

Later, however, Senator Logan ordered his remarks stricken from the record and announced contempt proceedings would be dropped.

As Senator Logan was dictating the citation to the official stenographer, the spectators filled the air with hoots, cat calls and boos.

Marshals Ignore Order.

Senator Logan shouted to United States marshals to get the names of the disturbers and bring them before the committee so they might also be cited for contempt. The marshals made no move to get names and the remainder of the hearing was filled with cheers and applause until the session was adjourned until 10 a. m., to morrow, when the reins of the committee will be given over to Senator Connally, the chairman.

Mr. Broussard and Mr. Rightor walked out together after Senator Long, whose political organization

Japanese Revamp Naval Command

Tokyo, Nov. 15 (AP).—Far-reaching changes in the high commanding posts of the Japanese navy were announced tonight, signifying a victory for dominant navy men.

Admirals Nomura and Kabayashi were appointed to the navy council, and Vice Admiral Nagano was made commander of the Yokusuka naval base.

It is believed the changes came as a result of the unrest among naval officers that has been apparent since Premier Inukai was assassinated last May.

De Valera Repudiates Treaty, Commons Told

London, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—James H. Thomas, secretary for the Dominions, announced in the House of Commons today that the government considers President De Valera's measures regarding the English crown's rights in the Free State repudiation of the 1921 Anglo-Irish treaty.

Mr. X Reveals Nazi Activities At U. S. Inquiry

Witness Keeps His Name Secret, But Another Talks Freely.

The mysterious Mr. X pushed his way through a cordon of special police in the House Office Building yesterday and told three members of Congress and a State Department official all he knew about Nazi propaganda in the United States.

After Mr. X told investigators about a letter purported to be written by one Walter Haag and revealed plans for propagandizing this country in favor of the Hitler ideals and policies, a witness was called who gave his right name, Joseph Smith. His elaborately printed card identified him as president of the National Association of American Seamen, Inc.

But the chairman said Joseph Smith didn't want to talk before the public.

He Talks Later.

So the committee went into executive session and the plain-clothes men looked relieved.

Called by Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, chairman of the House Immigration Committee, the witness began his testimony with no further identification than Mr. X. He was not put under oath, and any slip on his part that might have revealed either his name or his position was quickly checked by his questioners.

Joseph Smith, however, was not only willing to give his right name, but was anxious to give The Washington Post an outline of the testimony he gave in secret before the committee.

Stewards Used, He Says.

More than 70 per cent of the stewards aboard the ships of an American steamship line, he said, were naturalized Germans engaged in spreading Nazi propaganda. The method, he explained, was for the stewards to desert the ships in New

Snipers and Soldiers In Cuban Encounter

Havana, Nov. 14 (AP).—Unrest prevalent for weeks in interior, Cuba flared violently in Camaguey today when the fire of snipers drew return shots from soldiers and seven powerful bombs exploded in various parts of that city.

No casualties were reported, although the firing was general throughout the city. Soldiers barricaded themselves behind walls during the fusillades and later raided several buildings in an unsuccessful search for the assailants.

New City Heads Will Assume Office Tomorrow.

Gotwals Continues As Third Member

Former Surveyor Plans Change in Park Police Rule.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Melvin C. Hazen, District surveyor, who has grown gray in the service of the city, and George E. Allen, comparatively youthful vice president and general manager of Washington Properties, Inc., were appointed District Commissioners by President Roosevelt yesterday.

They will take the oath of office and assume their duties tomorrow. They succeed Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, retired physician, and Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, retired, former cavalry chief, whose three-year terms expired last April 9.

Maj. John C. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner, will continue in that post, completing the board of three.

Appointment of Mr. Hazen had been expected, but selection of Mr. Allen was a surprise. His sponsors, chief among whom was Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, kept his name out of the limelight since it first was published in The Washington Post last April 19 as that of a powerful "dark horse" with influential and determined backers.

Praises Commission Form.

That the new board will seek to chart its own course was indicated by Mr. Hazen a few minutes after announcement had been made at the White House.

Despite the fact President Roosevelt, during the months he delayed making the appointments, contemplated changes in the form of the District government, Mr. Hazen said the existing commission form of government was the best.

"We have the best governed and cleanest city in the country—bar none," he said. "The trouble has been not in the commission form of government, but in the division of authority. Authority should be centered in the District Commissioners."

He proposed reorganization of the executive work of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and referred to the increasing authority which assumed by the one-time officer in charge of public buildings and grounds.

Favors Park Police Change.

"The Engineer Commissioner of the District should be the executive officer of the planning commission," Mr. Hazen said. "The Engineer Commissioner has to do with the Free Port Plan Of La Guardia

Project for Staten Island Revealed in Havana by Mayor-Elect.

Havana, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Mayor-elect Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, announced here today that he intends to ask Congress to pass legislation creating a free port on Staten Island.

The fiery little major, a former member of the House of Representatives, told members of the American Club the move was designed to obviate the high costs of bonded warehouses, trucking and other incidental expenditures to commerce through New York port. He said he intended to smash warehouse "racketeering."

"But I'll have to quit trying to reform the whole world now, as I did in Congress," LaGuardia laughed, "and stick to New York. The establishment of a free port on Staten Island, I think, would facilitate transshipments and reduce overhead. Effecting, for example, Cuban shipments of sugar, Tobacco and other dutiable articles."

U. S. Ambassador Sumner Welles, also a guest, eulogized LaGuardia's liberalism.

Dalrymple Gets Job Hunting "Bootleggers" of Radio Waves

Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, who for a few short months was prohibition director, has got himself a job chasing "broadcasting bootleggers" down in Texas. His title is special assistant to the Attorney General.

The job, so far as can be learned, is that of seeking out so-called "bootleggers" who express their personal opinions or advertise hair oil over the ether without license by the Federal Radio Commission.

At the Radio Commission office considerable surprise was expressed. This is the first time, it was said, that the Department of Justice has displayed any particular interest in the Radio Commission, except when it became necessary to present a case before the Supreme Court.

Heretofore the commission has employed its own investigators.

A little research into the matter of just what is a radio bootlegger-chaser revealed these facts:

Out at Grand Island, Nebr., the Radio Commission, at a cost of $700,000, has erected a radio superstation. This station is able to pick up any other station in the world, to tell exactly on what wave length it is operating and from which direction. For some time waves that didn't show any evidence of being licensed were coming in from the direction of Texas. That called for investigation.

Investigation consists of driving a radio truck around Texas until a bootleg wave assumes volume. The truck circles around, coming closer and closer to the source of the waves, and then finally the investigator pounces on the "bootlegger."

It was "assumed" at the Radio Commission that this is the kind of job Maj. Dalrymple must have.

Some time ago the "radio bootlegger" abounded in Texas. There is a school of though which holds that if radio waves don't cross a

Sarraut Hurls Defi at Hitler, Wins Deputies

France Holds Moral, Arms Force, Premier Asserts; Bars 2-Power Talk.

Paris, Nov. 14 (AP).—In two overwhelming votes of confidence the Chamber of Deputies stood firmly behind the Sarraut government tonight, making it emphatically clear that France will bow to the dictates of no one.

Premier Albert Sarraut bluntly told the deputies that "France has a moral, material and military force that forbids anyone to dictate to her."

This and on Chancellor Adolph Hitler's Nationalistic Foreign policy brought Sarraut a sweeping vote of confidence, 545 to 11.

Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour flatly refused to settle Franco-German differences outside the League of Nations, thereby spiking rumors of the possibility of direct conversations with Chancellor Hitler.

This stand on the government's policy of "supervised and guaranteed disarmament" drew resounding approval in a vote of 392 to 194.

The premier, speaking before the chamber, told of the horrors of war and said he wished to "reassure mothers" because "forty millions of French are cool and calm and know no fear."

"No Preventive War."

But, he went on, "France is not disposed to make a panicky peace and will not concede what she should not concede."

The premier declared there would be "no preventive war" and asked Germany:

"Why rearm? Why increase a military force in an exhausted country until it is no longer anything but a skeleton in armor? The German policy would mean an armaments race."

The foreign minister acknowledged his fear of war with Germany and flatly refused to consider any arrangement for a direct settlement of differences with Chancellor Hitler outside the League of Nations.

"Any concrete proposition submitted to us is certain to be examined by us," he maintained, but added that "all accords between Germany and us must be reached in the league."

Comments on Plebiscite.

M. Sarraut said the result of the German election and plebiscite on foreign affairs Sunday was a foregone conclusion.

"Three million voters, however, freed themselves from this oppression," he said. He repeated the foreign minister's rejection of a face to face talk with German representatives, saying "we wish to talk before witnesses" * * * and "Geneva is the best place for the conversations."

Declaring that "Germany is speeding rearmament preparations begun long ago," the foreign minister pointed to French efforts to line up the former allies but disclaimed any thought of encircling Germany."

Sought Gold

Policeman's Home Wrong Spot; Seeker Jailed.

George Mockabee's quest for gold led him—not to the end of the rainbow—but into the home of a policeman.

Officer John J. Leu, of 3100 Whitehaven street northwest, testified in Police Court yesterday that Sunday morning he was awakened by some one trying to open the bedroom window. He reached out and grasped Mockabee.

Leu testified that Mockabee said he had been told there was "old gold on the place" and that he did not know it was the home of a policeman. Mockabee, 18, who lives at 1371 East Capitol street, demanded a jury trial and Judge Isaac R. Hitt set a $500 bond.

Economic Thought Progresses Rapidly in West; Recovery Held to Depend on Revision of Tariff Policies.

[This is the fourth of 10 articles written by Mr. Roosevelt after a month's tour through the Middle Western agricultural States.]

"The people of Iowa are much more aware than they were a few years ago that there is a direct relation between world affairs and the prices of Iowa farm products," a young professor in the agricultural college at Ames said to me the other day. I found the same sentiment in Wisconsin, Nebraska, Minnesota, and Kansas. With it inevitably came the question: What would happen if we continued on our present course toward economic self-sufficiency or isolation—economic nationalism, as they call it in Europe?

"Don't you think that the real solution for our farm problem is to be found in restoring our foreign markets for our farm products?" many people asked me. And they showed the keenest interest when I told them how the movement of economic nationalism was working out in Central Europe as I had observed it during the years 1930-33, which I spent there reporting on conditions to our Government.

Tariffs Vs. Prosperity.

Briefly, the European experience is as follows: Economic nationalism rests on impassable tariff barriers so that each country may produce the goods it requires without fear of underselling by foreigners. Impassable tariff barriers invite equally impassable tariff barriers by way of retaliation. This means a drastic reduction in exports in direct proportion to the barriers which other nations place on buying goods abroad. Hence, all industries living even only in part on the export trade have to curtail their production. This, in turn, results in a drastic readjustment in the Nation's internal economic structure.

How would such a policy affect the United States?

Without considering the highly important fact that the United States is dependent on foreign nations for such absolutely essential imports as rubber, sugar, silk, tin and nickel, and that as a result of economic isolation is impossible, let us for a moment see what productive enterprises in this country would be affected if we attempted to carry through our present policy.

Half of Cotton Exported.

Figures published by the International Chamber of Commerce show, of our principal agricultural products we exported in the year 1929, the following percentages: Cotton, 55 per cent; tobacco, 41 per cent; wheat, 18 per cent, and lard, 33 per cent.

These exports represent actual surpluses over home consumption. If we are to follow a policy of economic nationalism we must reduce our output of these crops accordingly. It requires little study to see that such drastic curtailment of our principal agricultural products would produce complete economic disruption. Instead of alleviating the farm crisis it would throw a large portion of the farm population into bankruptcy and out of work. It can only be contemplated with gravest uneasiness.

What is the alternative? Obviously to carry out the wishes of the people of Iowa who call for regaining markets for their farm products.

But here a new complication arises. The most effective argument made in defense of America's following a policy of economic nationalism is that the nations of the world are all moving in this direction. Candor compels the recognition that this movement has been materially accelerated by the conduct of the United States at the World Economic Conference held in London last June, when the President reversed his earlier position and absolutely refused to "play ball" or to carry out his original plans for international cooperation to remove the barriers of trade.

Delay Means Loss.

Regardless of responsibility for the failure of the conference, it must be noted that the movement toward economic nationalism in other countries, even if soon checked, is sure to bring about certain basic readjustments of their internal economy which will militate against the complete resumption of their former trade relations.

In other words, some of the economic developments abroad due to the move toward economic independence will prove profitable even if the present excess protection of native products is abandoned. This means that the longer the delay in the resumption of more international trade relations, the smaller will be the volume of American exports which we will be able to place abroad.

This, coupled with the inevitable delays in negotiating any agreements looking to a lowering of import restrictions, makes it more than ever imperative to move in the directions indicated by Secretary of State Hull and by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, both of whom have repeatedly made it clear in the past that they believe in finding more markets abroad for American produce.

The finding of markets abroad will be an ultimate stabilizer rather than a measure of emergency relief. But it rests on sound experience and is justified by the history of America's agricultural development. Should the move in the opposite direction triumph over this older and more conservative policy, we may expect to see the people in whole sections of the country pull in their belts still further.

The reason for this lies in the readjustments in production already indicated. If we curtail production as much as will be necessary—and all manner of industries which now depend largely on foreign markets would also be affected by such a policy and would have to reduce their output from 20 to 60 per cent—it means inevitably a slowing up of our entire economic life.

This slowing up means continued bad times, continued unemployment on a large scale, continued low wages, and hence an increasing deprivation of those many good things of life which during the last two or three decades we have come to consider as part of the American birthright.

Near Riot Halts Ballot Hearing supported Senator Overton in his campaign, had testified for an hour on how he played politics in Louisiana and concluded by giving each of the senators a copy of his book "Every Man a King."

Long Cites Intimidation.

Senator Long said every effort had been made to intimidate him and his political followers in Louisiana, and that a million dollars had been spent by his opposition.

He said during the Hoover Administration 116 internal revenue agents spent a year in Louisiana trying to get something on him and they worked with investigators the special Senate committee sent into the State.

"While I was in the Senate I would have people tell me all kinds of things about what would be done to me if I didn't do certain things," said Long. "But they didn't frighten us and I have not wavered from my course. They didn't find a thing on me and this committee has been probing here for a year and not a thing has been brought before them."

"Liar" Shouted at Long.

When he launched into a discussion of the dummy candidate situation in the Overton campaign he was interrupted by cries of "liar" and cat calls. He said Broussard had more dummy candidates than Overton and Overton's largest majority came from the precincts where there were no dummies.

In the midst of Senator Long's testimony, Mr. Rightor said he had been instructed by his client, Senator Broussard, to say that "Senator Long was testifying with falsehoods and that he knows they were false."

Later Francis Williams took the stand and said Senator Long had "lied" about dummy candidates. He said in New Orleans Broussard had 4 dummy candidates and the other side had 21 and Broussard had 200 commissioners against the others' 1,110.

Witnesses Promised.

Williams promised to bring witnesses before the committee tomorrow and Senator Logan said all would be heard.

After today's session adjourned, Senator Connally reached the city and said the committee was endeavoring "to conduct a fair and impartial investigation and it would not be browbeaten by any group, faction or individual in or outside Louisiana."

He said proper action would be taken against the committee's investigator, John G. Holland, who yesterday charged the committee with attempting "to close the investigation without going into evidence" and that Chairman Connally was "yellow" and was staying in Texas on "some slim excuse so he could sneak in here after the hearing had got down to routine."

Holland Charge 'Vile.'

Senator Connally said Holland's statement was "vile, scurrilous and untrue and that Holland knew he would be in New Orleans on Tuesday when he made that statement."

Before Mr. Rightor and Mr. Broussard walked out of the hearing, Senator Logan appologized to Mr. Rightor, saying his "nerves were frayed" and that he would gladly turn the investigation over to his colleague, Senator Thomas.

Senator Logan said it was apparent to him an effort was being made to run the committee out of town, but the investigation would be held although the committee is getting "no help from any one in Louisana."

"First the Honest Election League withdraws and now Mr. Broussard and his counsel quit us with insults," he said.

The Honest Election League withdrew yesterday with the statement they were convinced the committee "was not making a sincere effort to investigate Huey Long's politics that elected Senator Overton."

Sagging Bonds Again Menace Gold Program

Treasury Needing 6 Billion for Recovery Faces Problem in Slump.

(Associated Press.)

Sagging Government bond prices last night confronted the Administration anew with the problem of keeping the National credit unimpaired while attempting to force prices upward by its gold-buying program.

Purchases of the metal here and abroad have been accompanied by definite price increases and a sharp dollar depreciation in relation to the pound. Yesterday the pound closed at $5.22 in London and $5.26 in New York, in contrast with the exchange rate of $4.75 to $4.80 that prevailed when the gold operations were undertaken.

However, sharp declines in the dollar have induced a simultaneous slump in Government bonds.

The worst of the problem lay in the fact that the Government probably must borrow more than $6,000,000,000 to finance the public works program and other phases of the recovery drive.

Commodity Rise Menaced.

Officials asserted today that if faced with a choice between raising commodity prices by the gold method and maintaining Government security prices the decision undoubtedly would be the abandonment of the gold program.

However, the time for making such a choice, they said, has not yet arrived. The gold operations have been in progress only a few weeks, they emphasized, and an opportunity has not yet been had for definitely gauging its possibilities.

How to keep the gold plan going and steady the bond market at the same time was given the major attention of the group of Presidential advisors which gathered Sunday at the White House. They went over the situation and a decision was reached to stand by the gold purchasing but with a caution from Mr. Roosevelt to proceed carefully and avoid undue impairment of bond prices.

New Gold Price Up 11 Cents.

When Federal security quotations fell with the dollar last week, the fixed price of domestic newly-mined gold was placed below the dollar value of gold in London. The dollar grew stronger and bonds regained most of their losses.

Monday the dollar was sharply off again but did not make its influence felt on the bond market until its continued drop of yesterday.

Dollar Dive Stirs London.

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—The sterling value of the American dollar shrunk hourly today until, when the last quotation was recorded, it had fallen under heavy selling to $5.30, a record low level.

A pessimistic outlook regarding the dollar's future induced selling by bear speculators.

After the New York opening, fresh, low quotations came so fast in the London market that the latter was continually on the jump, but unable to keep the pace of the level across the Atlantic.

The dollar opened at $5.17½. It closed officially at $5.22, compared to yesterday's final quotation of $5.15.

operation among its component nations."

Attacks League of Nations.

He made a reference to the disarmament deadlock when he said that "progress can not be achieved until great injustices have been repaired."

His audience interpreted this as a reference to the Treaty of Versailles, to which Germany objects in its stand for equality.

Delving deeper into the political situation, the speaker launched an attack on the League of Nations and asserted that more and more hopes are being directed toward the four power agreement, signed last summer by Italy, France Germany and Great Britain.

"The league has lost most of its power," he maintained, pointing out that the first nation to support it had not joined the league. He did not mention the United States by name.

Russia, Germany and Japan have withdrawn, he pointed out.

Mussolini announced before the council yesterday that that body would be vested with legislative powers in economic affairs.

Socialist Mayor Coming Here To Find Out About New Deal

Bridgeport Official Pays Own Expenses on Junket.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Jasper McLevy, the Socialist roofer who yesterday became mayor of Bridgeport, got out his "other suit" tonight in preparation for a trip tomorrow to Washington to see what the new deal has for his city.

He is scheduled to arrive in the National Capital at 7:45 a. m.. He will attend a conference of public works officials. Mayor McLevy announced he will pay his own expenses on the trip.

McLevy said he has no program to present in Washington. "I want to see what they have to offer," he said. "However, anything the Federal Government does will be welcome because the sooner we get the people off the charity rolls the better it will be for the country."

He said he will not wear the usual blue suit which he wore throughout his campaign, and to his inaugural yesterday.

"You see," he said, "my blue suit sort of needs pressing. I think I'll wear my other suit."

"Which suit is that?" he was asked.

"Oh, it's just another dark suit I've got. I don't exactly remember the color."

Votes for Women Killed in France

Paris, Nov. 14 (AP).—The French Senate, perpetual opponent of women's suffrage, smothered an effort to revive the issue today by a vote of 175 to 118.

Before the Chamber of Deputies, however, there is a measure based on the premise that since French women share with men the burden of taxes they should share their suffrage rights.

Mail Contracts Quiz Will Reopen Today

The special Senate committee investigating ocean and air mail contracts will resume hearings today after a three-week adjournment. John J. Farrell and James A. Farrell, jr., officials of the American South African Steamship Co., will be the first witnesses.

It is expected that inquiry into all mail subsidies will begin during the week, even though investigation of all steamship companies holding Government mail contracts has not been completed.

though he admitted Fitzpatrick recently spent two weeks with him at Excelsior Springs, Mo., and discussed the transaction with him.

Rockefellers Mentioned.

"His story was that Blair & Co. wanted to make him some money," Sinclair said, adding that the Rockefellers "were interested" in helping him.

He said Fitzpatrick told him Blair & Co. acquired some shares from the Rockefellers, and he assumed the money had come from these shares.

When pressed for details, Sinclair said he could not give them.

Pecora brought out that negotiations were under way in 1929 for consolidation of Fitzpatrick's Prairie Oil Co. with Sinclair's Consolidated Oil Corporation. The merger was consumated four years later. Sinclair denied any connection between the merger and Fitzpatrick's participation in pool profits.

Sinclair admitted the money was paid Fitzpatrick at the expense of the other pool participants, however.

"Then it was a Santa Clause syndicate," observed Pecora.

"It seems a bit like it," Sinclair replied.

"Did you know they were hanging Santa Clause whiskers on you?" asked Pecora.

"I suppose so," admitted Sinclair.

Didn't Get New Dime.

"Did you get a new dime from the Rockefellers?" asked Senator Couzens.

"No," said Sinclair.

Sinclair told the committee he conferred with Arthur Cutten at a luncheon in Chicago Saturday, when the stock market hearings were discussed. He could not remember if the $300,000 payment to Fitzpatrick was mentioned, he claimed.

The following day in New York he conferred with Elisha Walker, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Hunter Marston, of Blair & Co. Walker was a coparticipant with Sinclair in the consolidated stock pool and a member of the Sinclair corporation's board. Again the investigation was discussed, he said.

Before testifying before the committee yesterday, he talked with Ruloff Cutten, who aided his cousin, Arthur Cutten, in managing the Sinclair pool, the witness added. Ruloff Cutten was on the committee witness stand yesterday morning. The hearings were not mentioned during their talk, Sinclair declared.

Sale Approved in 1928.

He told how both himself and Walker retired from an executive board meeting of the Consolidated Oil Corporation in October, 1928, when the "sale" of 1,030,000 shares of the corporation's stock to Cutten for syndicate purposes was approved.

"That's what directors of the R. F. C. do when they lend themselves money," commented Senator Couzens.

"Are you comparing my company with the R. F. C.?" asked Sinclair.

"I wouldn't be competent to make such a comparison, but they all know the same tricks," observed Couzens.

Sinclair disclosed that several officials of his company, some of whom sat in on the October, 1928, directors' meeting, later received subparticipation in the Sinclair pool. They included A. E. Watts, J. F. Farrell, E. W. Sinclair, H. P. Whitney, P. W. Thirtle and W. L. Connelly, he stated.

The Rev. Bigbie drove to Waurika, walked into the sheriff's office, tossed a small automatic pistol on the sheriff's desk and declared:

"I had to do it."

Tidwell, shot just above the heart, was taken to an Ardmore Hospital, where he was reported in a dangerously resulted from a controversy gerous condition.

Civic Leaders Praise Choice Of M. C. Hazen

Comments Indicate Allen Not So Well Known as Surveyor.

General approval of the choice of Melvin C. Hazen, District surveyor, as one of the District Commissioners was expressed yesterday by presidents of citizens associations.

They were more restrained in comments on appointment of George E. Allen, and some of them were critical.

All said they were pleased with the choice of Hazen because of his long experience in the District government and the fact that President Roosevelt picked a man from the ranks of District executives.

Comments of presidents of citizens associations follow:

James G. Yaden, Federation of Citizens Associations: "I am greatly pleased with the appointment of Mr. Hazen; first, because he is a capable executive, and, second, because he has come up through the ranks. I don't know Mr. Allen, but from what I hear his appointment is satisfactory."

Dr. Havenner Pleased.

Dr. George C. Havenner, of the Anacostia Citizens Association and former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations: "Mr. Hazen's appointment is one of the finest that could be made. He knows the District and he has been a faithful official of the District government. I don't know Mr. Allen."

Marvin M. McLean, Brookland: "I am well pleased with Mr. Hazen's appointment, and I think Mr. Allen is all right, though I don't know him."

Dr. Herbert F. Wright, Michigan Park: "Mr. Hazen's background and experience in District affairs should equip him admirably for the the post. I don't know Mr. Allen, but his business experience should fit him for commissioner."

J. S. Gorrell, Burleith: "I think Mr. Hazen is a worthy man. He has a much better background from the standpoint of civic interest than Mr. Allen. With regard to the latter appointment, at least, I think the views of the citizens' groups and individuals have been ignored."

Harry Friedman, Friendship: "I have never heard of Mr. Allen. We can only hope for the best."

R. W. Gates, Lanier Heights: "At this time, I can only say they seem to be good appointments. It seems as if the political end has been left out."

W. H. Seaquist, Manor Park: "I am somewhat disappointed; the final appointments came as a surprise. Mr. Allen does not seem to have the background necessary to be intimately acquainted with citizens' affairs. Mr. Hazen is no doubt well grounded on District matters."

Allan Fisher, Connecticut Avenue: "I am glad that a military man was not selected. Men with Army experience in the past have not proved satisfactory District executives. No doubt the long period of waiting has produced the best possible men for the jobs."

Reichelderfer Praised.

C. H. Bullock, Columbia Park: "We have always been satisfied with the board headed by Dr. Reichelderfer. It is my hope that the new appointees will carry on the work of the outgoing comissioners."

Miss Ella M. Thompson, Logan Circle—Thomas Circle: "It was a surprise. We had supported Arthur C. Smith and had hoped for his appointment. There were several other names I also thought more likely of designation."

George E. Strong, Chevy Chase: "I heartily approve both appointments. Both men are capable, and I believe they will give us a good government."

The executive committee of the Conduit Road Citizens Association was called together last night by Ellis R. King, president, and adopted a resolution congratulating Hazen and Allen on their appointments and wishing "the new commissioners a most successful administration and long enjoyable service."

Rainey Favors Buying Silver

Speaker Sees Congress Supplementing Gold Program.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey, back at his desk following a tour of the Midwest farm belt, yesterday predicted Congress may enact silver legislation to supplement the President's gold program.

Scouting forecasts that the coming session "will be either strenuous or uproarious," he saw little likelihood of direct currency expansion or collapse of the NRA.

He said he hoped silver legislation would take the form of Government purchase of silver on a gradually increasing scale, much as the gold program is being carried out. He said purchases should be confined to this country, and limited to newly mined silver.

"I don't see any reason silver should deliberately be cast aside as a money metal," he said. "Its use would seem particularly wise at this time, opening up new trade channels to the Orient and to South America. It is already used by half the world."

Moley Urges Recovery Role On Advertisers

Tells National Convention of Need for Balance in Consumption.

Liberally punctuating his remarks with references to the "New Deal," Raymond Moley, former Assistant Secretary of State, last night told members of the Association of National Advertisers in convention here that their profession "can perform a priceless service by attacking the vital problems which other organs of public opinion have failed to attack."

These, he asserted, were the problems of balancing National production, consumption and distribution. Involving approximately 18,000,000 American families, the problem of underconsumption offers a great opportunity for service to the advertising profession, he said.

"The advertising man can serve his clients well and the larger interests of the New Deal, if in every way he stresses community of interests—of farmer, worker, investor, buyer, seller and producer."

Stating the New Deal is founded upon the theory of cooperation, and not upon arbitrary dictation, Prof. Moley said "self organization and not organization" is the motto. This, he advised, the advertising profession might take as its slogan.

"Pardon a mere professor if he goes back to Plutarch," said Moley. The Athenians, he explained, with the great law-giver, Solon, as a leader set a precedent for President Roosevelt's gold and price policies. The Greeks "had a word for it" which they called "Seisacthea," and it was designed to cancel debts.

"The peculiar feature of advertising is that it envisions the entire economy of the country. It is more than a great industry by itself. It is a mirror which reflects our economic life as a whole. Under the New Deal the consumer has come into his own. The interests of the consumer are the interests of the country. You are the servants of the consumer, just as I, as a journalist, am the servant of the reader," Moley continued.

The New Deal has furthered National consciousness, said Moley. "It has taught us that nationalism is no longer the exclusive possession of a minority," he declared.

Speaking at the morning session of the convention, Walter B. Pitkin, professor of journalism of Columbia University, said, "We not only have an economic system in this country and an extra economic system, but you have an antieconomic system."

He characterized as America number one, honest workers, farmers and employers and their dependents. "America number two" are the "crooks and parasites," and total 6,000,000, he said. In the third group he placed unwilling drones, unemployed gradautes of colleges, idle farmers and dependents, totaling 60,000,000.

Allyn B. McIntire, vice president of the Pepperell Manufacturing Co., was elected president of the Association of National Advertisers to succeed Stuart Peabody, of the Borden Co., the new chairman of the board of directors. Turner Jones, of the Coca-Cola Co., was elected first vice president; Ralph Rogan, second vice president, and W. B. Geissinger, of the California Fruit Growers Exchange, third vice president. Paul B. West continues as secretary and managing director.

Speakers today will include Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the R. F. C., and George Peek, chairman of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The convention closes tonight with the annual banquet and an entertainment.

$3 Gallon Maximum Levy Advised by Interstate Commission.

Equal division of revenue from liquor taxes between the Federal Government and wet States was proposed yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Interstate Commerce Commission on conflicting taxation, comprising representatives from 14 States.

The group went on record as favoring $3 a gallon as the maximum tax on spirituous liquors with correspondingly lower levies on beverages of a lower alcoholic content. Volume or so-called gallonage taxes should be imposed on liquor only by the Federal Government, the resolution states.

The recommendations of the group will be sent at once to President Roosevelt for the consideration of his interdepartmental liquor committee, which is scheduled to meet again at the White Touse today. The committee will have ready a detailed program for control of the liquor traffic in the interim between December 5, when repeal becomes effective, and action by Congress.

The President's committee has not completed its deliberations over proposed increases in the liquor taxes, but it was reliably learned yesterday that a rate of $2.50 a gallon for whisky has found favor. This tax would be an increase of about 127 per cent over the present tax of $1.10 a gallon. It also is higher than some members of Congress believe the tax should be.

Distillers Are Disturbed.

News that the interdepartmental committee is considering a tax as high as $2.50 a gallon on distilled liquors disturbed distillery interests. In those quarters it was pointed out that such a Federal tax would require a retail price close to $4 a quart for good American whisky. Such a price, it was argued, would go far toward encouraging the bootlegger to continue business.

The interdepartmental committee at present is concerning itself chiefly with the formulation of a plan to protect dry States from liquor shipments from the 19 or more wet States after December 5. It is believed that an A. A. A. code for the distilling industry will be the Government's principal instrument.

Under this plan distillers would be required under a code to agree to guard against shipments into a dry State. Retail liquor dealers in another code would be required to agree to a similar restriction.

The interdepartmental committee has given lengthy consideration to a proposal for creation of a Federal Corporation to enjoy a monopoly in the wholesale distribution of liquor. But this scheme has not meet with favor within the committee. Under the plan all distillers would be required to sell their output to the Federal Corporation, which in turn would sell to the retail trade.

Toll Urges Agreement.

The Interstate Commission on Conflicting Taxation was created by the first Interstate Legislative Assembly, held here last February at the call of the American Legislators' Association. This assembly was composed of delegates from 32 States, named by Governors and Legislatures.

Henry W. Toll, State Senator from Colorado, and secretary of the commission, pointed out that unless some arrangement is reached for a division of taxing authority between the States and Federal Government "the utmost confusion will follow repeal," and liquor taxes will become so high the business will be thrown back to "the rackateers."

The interstate commission contended taxes should be imposed on the principle that "the social implications of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment greatly outweigh in importance its revenue aspects." Therefore it was proposed that "volume taxes or so-called gallonage taxes—whether direct or indirect, should be imposed upon liquor by the Federal Government only, and only at a moderate rate," in no event to exceed $3 a gallon on spirituous liquors.

The resolution proposed that in dividing equally the revenue, sums obtained by the States from licenses or other fees or levies on the liquor business should be divided with the Federal Government.

Fate of Soviet Parleys Here Up to Moscow

Stalin Must Accept Edict of "Discussion Before Recognition."

America is recognized, other countries will at once want their shelved claims met. The sums are large.

If it is propaganda, here again the Soviet government would very much hate to concede, for example, that it has any real influence on the Third International, the source of whatever propaganda there is.

Only the other day a question was asked in the House of Commons in London about Communist propaganda in India. This is an old thorn in the side of the British lion. But what would Britain say if the Soviet government implied to the United States in any manner that it could control the source of such propaganda, the Third International? This matter of control is, incidentally, the only phase of the propaganda issue which could give real trouble to the negotiators.

Religion Not Cause.

Religion can scarcely be giving much trouble; for religious freedom is guaranteed by the Soviet Constitution. The Communist party is antireligious; the government is neutral. Proselytizing would never be permitted, but worship by foreigners in Russia in their own way is permitted to all countries.

Recognition is, of course, worth a great deal to the Soviet Union, especially if one recalls the Far East and does not lose sight of the desirability of credits with which to insure the success of the second Five-Year Plan.

But the Soviet government has shown a love for the principle of a thing before this. It is possible for the Politburo, the highest governing body in Russia, of which Stalin is the leading member, to decline to pay the price which is apparently being demanded: discussion first.

This is not to be taken as a likelihood; it is a possibility.

In any event it will require a big gulp to swallow the medicine.

Teapot Dome Casts Shadow Over Fall's Tax Fight Today

Echoes of Teapot Dome and the Harding administration oil scandals will be heard at the Board of Tax Appeals today, when Albert B. Fall's income tax case will come up for consideration, with possible dismissal of the action involved.

Fall, held $159,127 short in his income tax and subject to $77,198 additional penalties as a result of the scandals, has claimed he no longer is liable for the tax or penalties because of the statute of limitations. His wife, named codefendant, has filed motion to have the case against her dismissed.

The board today will be asked to permit Fall to file an amended petition in which he claims freedom from liability on the 1921, '22 and '23 taxes because of the four-year statute of limitations pertaining to collection of back taxes.

Should the petition be allowed and subsequently upheld in final hearing, it will mean dismissal of the Government's $235,325 case against the former Secretary of the Interior. Allowance of his wife's motion will automatically dismiss her from the action.

The action has stretched over the last three years in litigation. Hearings were continued because of Fall's confinement in the New Mexico Penitentiary and later because of his continued illness. Attorneys for the Falls were changed three times.

Following the Teapot Dome disclosures and the airing of the money transfers from Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny to Fall the Government held Fall and his wife deficient $33,744 in their 1921 income tax and assessed a penalty of $16,872. For 1922 it held the Falls $116,923 deficient with a $58,461 penalty, and for 1923 they were held $7,458 deficient with $1,864 penalty.

It based its case on including in Fall's 1921 income the $100,000 advanced to the Interior Secretary by E. L. Doheny; including in his 1922 income the $233,000 in Liberty Loan bonds advanced him by Harry F. Sinclair, and by including in his 1923 income the equally famous payments to Fall of $35,000 in cash and $25,000 in bonds by Sinclair, which included the $10,000 "expenses" for Fall's trip to Russia.

20 Governors Will Plan Jobs For 4,000,000

500 State, Local Officials Confer on Spending $400,000,000.

ployed men will be given work will differ from those included in the regular public works program. They will consist of such tasks as highway maintenance, beautification of parks and parkways, eradication of pests such as swamp drainage and similar projects which, while useful, can not now be undertaken by local authorities.

This work will not be done under contract. Each community will carry forward its own projects, once they have been approved and the necessary money allocated. Engineering and technical guidance for the work as well as tools and machinery required will be supplied by local governments under the plan that has been formulated.

Money Running Low.

Many communities have been engaged in absorbing unemployment on a similar but smaller scale. In some of these communities the money for such work is running low. It is the President's idea not only to keep such work going, but to expand it and to get it started in all parts of the country.

President Roosevelt and his relief aids believe that within the next month they can get 4,000,000 men at work under this plan. According to their computations this would have the effect of removing some 10,000,000 persons from the relief rolls, if the families of the men given this work are included.

The conference of governors, mayors and other officials will start at 10 a. m. at the Mayflower Hotel with Mr. Hopkins presiding. He will outline the general scope of the plan and will discuss in detail the regulations which have been formulated.

Luncheon for Groups.

After the morning session the conferees will gather in seven regional groups to have luncheon. Following luncheon these groups will discuss problems peculiar to their sections. The Federal relief workers and Government departmental chiefs also will meet at this time under the leadership of Jacob Baker, assistant relief administrator, to discuss plans for putting thousands of men to work on strictly Federal projects under the C. W. A. program.

The entire group will go to the White House at 4:30 p. m. to hear President Roosevelt's message.

Varying Price Of Gold Urged To Spur Trade

Sliding Value Would Keep U. S. Independent, Says Prof. Pearson.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—Prof. F. A. Pearson, of Cornell University, asserted today the United States can establish its internal business conditions largely independent of other nations by allowing the price of gold to vary.

Pearson, who collaborated with Prof. George F. Warren, adviser to President Roosevelt, in a study of gold and the price level, told the Cooperative Grange League:

"When a country permits the price of gold to vary, it can establish any price level it desires independent of other countries."

The United States, he said, was 1 of 33 nations that have abandoned the attempt to maintain their legal fixed prices for gold and are raising the buying prices of the metal.

France, Belgium and Italy, on the other hand, said Pearson, have retained the gold standard but have raised their buying price of gold above the prewar amount by reducing the amount of metal in the monetary units.

"A dollar based on a legal fixed price for gold is a 'hard' dollar that rings true on the counters of the world," said Prof. Pearson.

"Because the value of gold varies widely, this 'hard' dollar does not ring true on the domestic counters. It buys commodities and services at one time that it does not at another.

'So long as a nation buys gold at a legal fixed price, its monetary unit is 'hard' and fixed as to weight but variable as to value. It makes no difference whether the monetary unit is called a dollar, pound, franc, or shilling."

Travel Lecture Shows Views Of Queer Fish

600 Hear Dr. R. W. Miner Discuss Experiences in Bahamas.

Movies of strange tropical fish featured an illustrated lecture on the Bahamas last night in Masonic auditorium.

Six hundred persons heard Dr. Roy Waldo Miner, curator of lesser invertebrates, American Museum of Natural History, unfold his impressions of several expeditions to the islands in the second of a series of travel talks sponsored by the Washington Travel Guild in cooperation with The Washington Post.

Slides and movies depicting life at the bottom of the sea included views of coral reefs, with sun rays bringing out their rich color. Many of the views were photographed with cameras focused by divers.

An artist was shown completing an oil painting while his head and shoulders were covered with a diving helmet. He reclined on the ocean floor and spread colors on his canvas with a knife.

Other views depicted trim sailing craft, palm covered keys, quaint Bahama buildings, streets and paths, tropical flowers, towering hotels and rare specimen of sea life.

Dr. Miner explained operation of diving helmets. Movies gave glimpses of both men and women sauntering 20 feet or more beneath the surface as air was pumped from launches overhead.

Miss Mary G. Whiteman, Washington stylist, with living models, displayed sports costumes, evening gowns and other clothes suitable in the Bahamas.

An illustrated lecture on the West Indies will be presented next Tuesday at 8:15 p. m.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 14 (AP).—Neville Miller, who on next Tuesday will become the first Democratic Mayor Louisville has elected in 16 years, defeated Col. Dan M. Carrell, Republican, by 3,160 majority on the face of complete, unofficial tabulation today. The totals were 65,716 for Miller and 62,556 for Carrell.

Strife Resumed By Diemakers

Detroit Workers Say Pact Violated; Ford Steel Plant Reopens.

Detroit, Nov. 14 (AP).—Threats of a general strike were heard tonight in the wake of the recently settled strike of tool and diemakers.

Jay J. Griffen, chairman of the joint strike committee of the Mechanics Educational Society of America, said that unless employers stop discrimination against former employes who walked out, and put these men on the pay roll as they agreed in the strike settlement, a general strike will be called.

The M. E. S. A. has protested that the society was not in favor of the present code for tool and diemakers, reported from Washington as about to be passed.

Detroit, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Resumption of operations today at the Ford Motor Co.'s steel plant, nonproductive for 18 months, was the forerunner of reemployment of a large force of employes, officials indicated tonight.

The type of steel Ford uses has advanced $10 a ton in recent weeks and the company believes it would be more profitable to return to the operation of its steel plant, it was explained.

Don't let jangled nerves rob you of poise

Foot tapping . . . table drumming . . . just can't sit still . . . Immediately you brand such a person as lacking in poise . . . "jittery." Foot tapping is a definite sign of jangled nerves . . . nerves out of tune.

Watch your nerves. Get your full amount of sleep every night. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation. And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

How are YOUR nerves?
TEST No. 9

Hold a needle with a large eye between thumb and index finger of left hand—upright position. Take a piece of strong cotton thread, roll it until it is firmly pointed. Hold the thread and needle twelve inches from your body . . . Pass the thread through the eye without touching the needle with the fingers of the right hand. The average score is hitting the eye on the third try.

Frank White (Camel smoker), famous pilot, member of Adventurers Club, threaded his needle the first time.

Other District Plums Remain Gossip Theme

Attorney's Post Has Many Applicants; Leaders at Variance.

Appointment of the District Commissioners yesterday put an end to months of speculation over who would be selected. At the same time speculation about who will be selected for other District posts was intensified.

President Roosevelt has said he hopes to dispose of District appointments before he leaves Washington on a vacation trip Friday. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings conferred with the Chief Executive during the day and it was understood names of candidates for United States district attorney were discussed.

The President recently named Miss Fay L. Bentley to be judge of the juvenile court, a post which Miss Kathryn Sellers, incumbent, refuses to give up pending confirmation of Miss Bentley's appointment by the Senate. In that appointment the President did not consult with local Democratic leaders. Miss Etta Taggart, who was active in the Roosevelt campaign, sought the post.

Opposed Organization.

When he named Mr. Hazen and Mr. Allen as District Commissioners the President again turned his back on the local organization headed by John F. Costello, National committeeman, and John B. Colpoys.

They had advocated the appointment of Malcolm S. McConihe and Ernest G. Walker, both of whom had been active in the preconvention and subsequent Roosevelt campaign.

Privately, it is believed, the local leaders have been most anxious about winning appointment of Ralph A. Cusick as district attorney. They have run into considerable opposition on the part of supporters of others, however, and if the final decision is made it is not known.

Lucian H. Vandoren has the support of many members of the District bar and is said also to be the choice of Assistant Attorney General Stanley, who has to do with appointments in the Department of Justice.

Other Names Mentioned.

Several others have been named in the political gossip, including John P. Bramhall, Lansdale G. Sasscer, Maryland State Senator, Upper Marlboro neighbor of Mr. Stanley; John E. Laskey, former district attorney, and Leslie G. Garnett, law partner of C. C. Carlin, of Alexandria, Va. Mr. Garnett has been listed in some quarters as a possible appointee to the bench when the next vacancy occurs. Former Municipal Court Judge Michael Doyle also has been discussed for the attorney's place. The President himself asked about the availability of Mr. Laskey, and this has brought his name to the fore recently, although it is not known what decision has been made.

Some have expressed the belief that the President considers the work of the local Democratic organization will be adequately recognized by the contemplated appointment of Mr. Colpoys as United States marshal when the term of Edgar C. Snyder, incumbent, expires.

Suspect Arrested In Highway Slaying

Shawnee, Okla., Nov. 14 (AP).—Shortly after his arrest at the home of his stepmother here today, Virgil M. Brown was charged with murder at El Reno in the slaying, October 17, of Mrs. Marie Elmsley, of Windsor, Ontario, Canada.

Under grilling by County Attorney Sam Robertson, Brown, claiming he married the Windsor woman in Oklahoma City a year ago, broke into tears but denied killing Mrs. Elmsley.

Her body, with three wounds in the head, was found on a highway near El Reno. A car, identified as that in which the Canadian woman and Brown left Frenso, Calif., together about October 2, was seized when the suspect was arrested.

Colleagues Congratulate Newly Named Commissioner

Melvin C. Hazen, District surveyor, is congratulated by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan and members of his staff upon his appointment as District Commissioner.

Hazen, Allen Appointed New District Commissioners work and plans of that commission and has immediately under his direction experts in the various fields of municipal work involved, such as sewers, highways and others."

Frederic A. Delano, uncle of the President, is head of the Park and Planning Commission and to him was attributed the President's idea that the city government might be changed and the Board of Commissioners replaced by a city manager given the title of governor, although appointed by the President.

Transfer of the United States park police, now under the Interior Department to the Metropolitan police department was cited by Mr. Hazen as an example of reorganization and shifting of authority and functions which might be made with resulting economy in administration and efficiency in operation.

The public schools should be put under the Commissioners as should all of the playgrounds and recreation centers; some of the existing municipal departments should be reorganized, he said.

Favors Budget Change.

Preparation and control of the District budget should be removed from the Federal Bureau of the Budget, he said.

Mr. Hazen's views were set forth in interviews with newspaper reporters, supplementary to a written statement in which he expressed his pleasure over the honor conferred on him and pledged his best efforts. He expressed his views with a conviction born of years of experience in the District service and with an almost complete absence of any challenge.

"I will be just one of three Commissioners," he said. "One of the principal points toward which I will strive will be a better feeling between the Commissioners and the citizens of the District and Congress.

"I feel deep appreciation," he said in his prepared statement, "to the President of the United States for the honor he has conferred upon me in naming me as one of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. I am grateful for the confidence he has placed in me. It shall be my aim during my term of office to justify that confidence.

Thank Friends for Support.

"I am thankful to my friends for their loyalty and support. It has been a source of great satisfaction during the past several months to find so many loyal and devoted friends.

"My close contact with our city government for many years leads me to believe that there are improvements which can be made in the service, although I am not prepared at this time to discuss a reorganization. It will be my purpose to make every effort to improve the service where the city of Washington, and as far as it is within my authority I shall insist upon efficient service and courteous treatment to our citizens. I want the citizens of the District of Columbia to feel that the Commissioners are their Commissioners, and intensely interested in all of their problems.

"It is extremely important to have the unanimous backing of the citizens when the Commissioners are interested in securing beneficial legislation, and I want them to feel free to call upon me at any time. I believe that a closer and better understanding should be had between the citizens, the Commissioners and the Congress. This should result in a mutual benefit to our city, and the Federal Government."

Edward A. Dent, 5110 Thirty-eighth street northwest, who has been Mr. Hazen's assistant, and who has been in the office for some years, is expected to succeed him as surveyor.

Upon returning from New York, Mr. Allen said:

"Of course I appreciate greatly the honor which has come to me and the confidence the President has evidenced in the appointment. I hope to justify that confidence by doing a good job."

Mr. Allen refused to discuss District affairs until he had taken office.

U. S. Will Keep Oil Trade Rule

Ickes Refuses to Release "Industry Unable to Govern Itself."

Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, last night told the oil industry that he had no intention of relaxing his control over Federal efforts to reestablish an industry that had failed to govern itself, according to the Associated Press.

Ickes gave this notice in a statement commenting on reports that Wirt Franklyn, chairman of the planning and coordinating committee of the oil code, had urged oil men to appeal to the Secretary that "control of the industry be vested completely with the planning and coordination committee."

This committee represents the oil industry on the code. It is subject to Ickes, who is given wide powers under the charter.

At the same time the Secretary announced that J. Howard Marshall, Assistant Solicitor of the Interior Department, had been sent to California to investigate reports of violations of production control allocations. Ickes reiterated that all such violators would be dealth with "swiftly and severely in the courts."

Lives of New Commissioners Show Interesting Contrasts

Hazen in District Posts Since 1889; Allen Had One Public Job.

Contrast marks the history and appearance of the two men appointed District Commissioners by President Roosevelt yesterday.

Tall, spare, gray and tan, Melvin C. Hazen began his career in the District Government before George E. Allen, his running mate, was born.

Mr. Allen had one taste of public office. When he was 21 years old he was named city attorney of Okolona, Miss., when he began practice of law. Then came the World War, France, private business.

Mr. Hazen began as school teacher, his second job was in the District service. Mr. Allen plays golf, Mr. Hazen rides and breeds horses.

The middle initial in the Hazen name stands for Colvin, his mother's family name. He was born in Prince William County, Va., October 27, 1867. He studied in the county schools and was graduated with the degree of B. A. from the University of Maryland, in 1888. In 1913 he was given the degree of civil engineer by that university.

Started With Transit.

He taught school in Prince William County until he was appointed transit man in the District Highway Department July 1, 1889. He subsequently was promoted to be assistant engineer, then assistant District surveyor on January 16, 1905, and when William P. Richards was made District assessor, Mr. Hazen was named surveyor July 27, 1908, for the four-year term prescribed in law. He has been reappointed since. Meanwhile, on October 22, 1896, he married in Washington Miss Mary Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Curtis and Lydia (Faunce) Smith.

He was one of a group who founded the Columbia Permanent Building & Loan Association in 1904 and for several years has been president of it. He also is a director of the Lincoln National Bank. He helped organize the National Capital Horse Show, of which he now is vice president.

His interest in horse riding and breeding has extended through his life. He has suffered one or two severe injuries when his mounts fell in the course of a hunt in Virginia, where he maintains a country home at Nokesville. The home has been in possession of his family for several years and was built by John Fitzhugh in 1750.

It was through his interest in horses that he came into such close contact with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, who was President Wilson's personal physician.

Admiral Grayson, also a Virginian, was, like Hazen, a Democrat, and when President Roosevelt was elected, John F. Costello, District national committeeman, named Admiral Grayson chairman of the inaugural committee. During his service in that post, Admiral Grayson's acquaintance with Mr. Roosevelt ripened, and although the President was said to have offered him the Commissionership, he refused and successfully pleaded the cause of Mr. Hazen.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazen have their Washington home at 1829 Sixteenth street northwest, although they spend much time at their home in Virginia.

Mr. Allen was born in Booneville, Miss., February 29, 1896. He was graduated from the University of Mississippi with an A. B. degree in 1915. In 1917 he was given the degree of LL. B. by Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tenn. He returned to Mississippi and began practice of law at Okolona, and was made city attorney at 21.

He held that post until he entered the Army in the World War. He served in France as a first lieutenant with the 140th Machine Gun battery. When the war ended he became an executive in the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce and later was managing director of the Louisville, Ky., convention and publicity league. In 1921 he entered the hotel business as managing director of the Belmont and the Lake Shore Drive hotels in Chicago.

Came Here Five Years Ago.

Mr. Allen came to Washington five years ago as general manager of the hotel properties of Wardman Properties, Inc., when that corporation was organized by a Midwestern group. The Wardman corporation since has been supplanted by the Washington Properties, Inc., operating the Wardman Park, Carlton, Chastleton and other properties.

On September 10, 1930, he married Miss Mary Keane, of Washington, at Sacred Heart Catholic Church. They have no children. They make their home at Wardman Park Hotel.

Aged Kidnap Victim Found

Missing From Staunton, Baltimore Man Turns Up in New Orleans.

Staunton, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—J. W. Sterling, 71, wealthy Baltimore fruit and produce operator, has been found in New Orleans following his strange disappearance from Staunton November 6.

Investigation by police here has developed that Mr. Sterling was held up and kidnaped on that night somewhere near Staunton and driven to Louisiana. He is expected back in Baltimore tomorrow morning.

Sterling was engaged in purchasing apples in Virginia. He was with a stranger just before vanishing near Staunton. Sterling usually carried about $100 in his pockets.

Police here received a telegram from Mrs. Sterling in Baltimore saying he had advised her that he had had "an awful experience. A knockout."

N. F. Helmers Heads National Contractors

Association Convention Asks Fair Competition Code for Industry.

N. F. Helmers, of St. Paul, Minn., was nominated for president of the Associated General Contractors of America at the conclusion of a two-day meeting in the Munsey Building yesterday. A. W. Merchant, of Providence, R. I., was nominated for National vice president at large. Nominations are equivalent to election.

The contractors urged immediate adoption of the proposed code of fair competition for the construction industry. A resolution was adopted asking the Public Works Administration to take the lead in setting an economically justifiable construction wage scale by downward revision.

John W. Cowper, of Buffalo, N. Y., former president of the association, said, "When you starve capital, you are just as effectively starving the working man."

Contract Team of Four Wins Vanderbilt Cup

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The team of Frank Rendon, Benjamin Feuer, Sidney Rusinow and Phil Abramshon today won the Vanderbilt Cup for the team-of-four championship in contract bridge.

At the end of the 100-board final match, they held a 1,260-point margin of victory over the team of L. H. Watson, A. M. Barnes, Richard Frey and Sam Fry, jr.

Federal Liabilities.

As a result of a recent survey, the National Industrial Conference Board estimates Federal expenditures under the recovery program, plus the "contingent liabilities of the Federal Government," at $15,135,000,000. This does not mean, of course, that the Federal budget will be expanded by that amount. Nor is the Government directly liable for all of this vast sum. The figure represents the credits which Congress has authorized various agencies to use in connection with the recovery program and the direct Federal expenditures for public works, relief, agricultural adjustment, etc.

Direct Federal expenditures under the recovery program, as estimated by the Industrial Conference Board, will amount to at least $5,000,000,000. Included in this total are $3,150,000,000 for public works; $1,100,000,000 for benefit payments to farmers; $500,000,000 for emergency relief, and $250,000,000 for conservation work.

All but $646,512,000 of the public works fund has been allotted, and the Public Works Administration expects to set aside this remaining sum for specific projects during the next six weeks. It is contemplated that most of this money will be spent within the next year, although a few allotments have been made to projects that will require as much as three years for completion.

Most of the farm relief fund will be raised through processing taxes on staple crops, and distributed directly to farmers agreeing to curtail production this year and next. Heavy demands are being made upon the emergency relief fund, and present indications are that it will not last through the coming year. The Government is making notable progress in the disposition of these direct appropriations.

Some of the other obligations incurred under the recovery program are of a different nature. The conference board estimates that total liabilities amounting to $2,485,000,000 may be incurred by the Farm Credit Administration. Of that sum $485,000,000 represents advances from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Treasury. Congress authorized farm credit agencies to issue bonds up to $2,000,000,000 for the purpose of refinancing mortgages, and guaranteed the payment of interest on such bonds.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation was authorized to issue bonds up to $2,000,000,000, on a similar basis, and it has been granted an advance of $200,000,000 by the R. F. C. Likewise Congress agreed to guarantee interest payments on bonds of the Tennessee Valley Authority up to $50,000,000. The Industrial Conference Board estimates that the Government will incur a "contingent liability" of $2,000,000,000 through the guarantee of bank deposits.

In addition to the advances by the R. F. C. already mentioned, the board estimates that that agency has a lending ability of $3,400,000,000. This estimate apparently does not take into account the fact that under a provision in the emergency banking act the R. F. C., on request from the Secretary of the Treasury, may purchase an unlimited amount of the preferred stock of banks that are in need of funds. The R. F. C. may sell any amount of bonds that may be necessary "to carry out the provisions of this section."

R. F. C. funds also are being drawn upon to buy gold in support of the administration's monetary policy. It is impossible to forecast the sum that may be used for this purpose.

So far as the taxpayer is concerned there is a vast difference between outright expenditures and the financing of mortgages. Nevertheless, the obligations undertaken by the Government to aid home and farm owners, distressed banks, industries, etc., must be taken into consideration when an attempt is made to estimate the potential strain upon the Government's credit resulting from the entire recovery program. The total of expenditures and emergency financing authorized by Congress, for which the Government is wholly or partly liable, amounts to about one-half the entire Federal debt.

Chicago's Fair.

Chicago's Century of Progress exposition has closed its gates for the winter. During the 158 days that this great fair was open to the public approximately 22,000,000 persons were admitted. Revenue amounting to about $35,000,000 has been collected. In comparison with similar expositions, the fair attained a high degree of success.

While it has closed its gates the Chicago fair has not yet passed into history as a completed chapter. Plans are being worked out to reopen the exposition next year. Chicago doubtless expects several million more people to visit her great show. The millions who attended this year will tell their friends about the fair. Chicago also may be depended upon to introduce some novel features next season to entice this year's visitors back for a second glimpse.

The fair really became more than an exposition. Originally it was planned as an exhibit of the progress of the world during the last hundred years. But while plans were going forward depression spread over every land.

When the fair was opened to the public last spring it became a challenge to adversity. Chicago dared to go forward with a gigantic enterprise in spite of pessimistic reports and dull business. Its courage was rewarded. The Windy City was a center of activity throughout the summer.

District Commissioners.

The people of the District of Columbia are intensely interested in the appointment of two Commissioners yesterday by President Roosevelt. He has selected Melvin C. Hazen, District surveyer, and George E. Allen, manager of the former Wardman Hotel properties. These gentlemen will succeed Chairman Luther H. Reichelderfer and Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, whose terms expired last April and who have since remained on the board at the request of the President.

Mr. Hazen has been active in District affairs for many years, and is thoroughly identified with Washington. His duties as surveyor have enabled him to become familiar with every portion of the District. He enjoys a wide acquaintance which will be useful in the contacts between Congress and the District government.

Mr. Allen has been a resident of Washington about five years. His qualifications as a business executive doubtless appealed to the President as promising an efficient administration of District affairs.

Dr. Reichelderfer and Gen. Crosby have served the public faithfully and well, and they are entitled to the thanks of the community for remaining on duty long after they were ready to retire.

Sources of Crime.

Two significant facts are outstanding in the crime report of the Department of Justice for the third quarter of 1933. Youths constituted a large percentage of the individuals arrested during that period, and former convicts made up another large percentage.

The prevalence of crime in the younger age groups frequently has been pointed out by the Department of Justice. One of every five persons arrested during the first nine months of this year in cities furnishing information to the department was under 21 years of age; another was between 21 and 24; a third between 25 and 29. In other words, of every five persons arrested, three were under 30.

Larceny, burglary, robbery and theft of automobiles are the four most prevalent crimes committed by young men. It is interesting to note, also, that crimes of this type are more numerous during the winter months.

The tendency of men to revert to crime after they have once been arrested for a serious offense is shown by the fact that 35 per cent of the 240,871 alleged offenders whose records were examined in the first nine months of this year already had fingerprints on file in Washington. Some of them may not have been convicted before. On the other hand, many of the individuals arrested this year may be former offenders whose records have not been forwarded to the Division of Investigation.

The relationship between vicious crimes and habitual criminals is marked. Investigators for the Department of Justice have found that many second, third and fourth offenders have been convicted of homicide, assault, burglary, robbery, carrying concealed weapons, larceny, &c. There seems to be no doubt that a large percentage of the more violent crimes perpetrated in all parts of the country are chargeable to criminals of the recidivist type.

Theft of a Rembrandt.

The theft of a Rembrandt picture, "Jeremiah Mourning Over the Destruction of Jerusalem," is reported from Stockholm: The picture is the property of a private collector, and is said to be valued at $145,000.

It is, of course, virtually impossible to sell for a large sum any recognized old masterpiece of painting. A genuine Rembrandt is so well known by connoisseurs and curators that no thief would dare to exhibit before them such a work for sale. The best he can do is to imitate the kidnaping fraternity by demanding a "ransom" for the safe return of the painting.

This was done in the case of Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa," stolen from the Louvre. Great secrecy was observed on both sides in that transaction, and the public is not yet advised as to the price paid, if any, for the return of the masterpiece. All that has been disclosed is that the painting, unharmed, was restored to the museum.

Many years ago thieves cut out a large portion of Murillo's "St. Joseph," hanging on the walls of the Cathedral of Seville. The fragment seems to have passed through several hands and was lost to sight for several years, during which the cathedral authorities made a world search for it.

The piece was finally purchased by the elder J. Pierpoint Morgan, who was unaware of the fact that it had been stolen. When he learned that it belonged in Seville he immediately returned it to the owners, without charge, and it was restored to its place with such skill that a casual inspection woul fail to reveal that the great painting had been mutilated.

The completeness with which the works of old masters are now catalogued makes a repetition of the foregoing incident practically impossible. No experienced collector will purchase a work whose present whereabouts and ownership are in doubt. Thieves dare not approach reputable dealers, and public galleries are as wary as collectors in identifying pictures offered for sale.

The thief who has stolen the Stockholm Rembrandt may manage to extort a few thousand from the owner for the safe return of his treasure, but at great risk of detection and punishment. If he can not obtain cash by means of a "ransom," he will find that stealing world-renowned masterpieces is poor business because of the absence of a market.

Journalistic Interpreters.

A well-known representative of American journalism says that the "task of interpreting technical matters to the layman furnishes the most inviting single opportunity which lies in the days ahead." Applying this generalization to the economic field, this statement implies that writers for the daily press and for periodicals are likely to succeed, if they are able to explain in simple language the nature and the working of the economic forces which affect intimately the lives of the people.

Much of the current news relating to monetary and economic topics is meaningless to the average person unless the statement of facts is accompanied by interpretative explanations. The editorial writer, in turn, often finds it necessary to expound certain theories in order to make his opinions intelligible to the lay reader. As a result, the work of interpretation is now part of news and editorial comment to an extent that would have seemed inconceivable in former years when social and economic institutions were less complicated.

The task of interpreting the news has become a journalistic art which requires considerable skill. The news reporter who handles technical data must be well informed in order to present his material in readable form without doing violence to the facts. He must display analytical skill also in selecting the material presented, and judgment in appraising its significance.

Some of the so-called authorities who deal with the causes and remedies of the present depression have not set a good example for the news gatherers and news expounders who may look to them for guidance. Indeed, many of the experts who are supposed to speak with authority yield to a temptation to oversimplify their theoretical explanations quite as much as do certan popular journalistic interpreters.

For example, we find one group of monetary theorists placing almost exclusive emphasis upon the decline in commodity prices as the chief originating cause of the depression, without considering the multifarious causes of that antecedent price decline or its unequal incidence. As a result of such a distorted interpretation of the facts, propaganda in favor of currency manipulation as a means of raising prices and restoring prosperity falls upon receptive soil.

Similarly, the over-emphasis placed upon high wages as a means of increasing general purchasing power is vitiated by a neglect of other elements that help to determine the volume of mass purchasing power. Again, so-called experts frequently ignore the geographical and historical influences which affect economic life, and the institutional and temperamental differences which play such a large part in economic affairs.

There is always danger that interpreters of the news will be tempted to indulge this same propensity to oversimplify the complex data which they are trying to make understandable to an untutored public.

The journalist who is sure of his own omniscience and complacently dogmatic in presenting his conclusions to admiring readers is apt to do more harm than good. Part of the public may wish to be told what to think, but the interpreter of current news should aim higher. He should assist his readers to think for themselves by eliminating the nonessential without trying to persuade them that the problems presented have been solved by his interpretative efforts.

The Smithsonian Abroad.

On the distant summit of Mount St. Katherine, on the Sinai peninsula, an American astronomer of the Smithsonian Institution has set up his instruments to make daily observations of the radiation output of the sun. The astrophysical observatory of the Smithsonian for years has been measuring solar radiation in Washington, California and Chile, but reliable data from the Eastern Hemisphere also are considered essential.

It is to supply this need that Harlan H. Zodtner and his family have settled on the summit of Mount St. Katherine to take observations near the historic spot where Moses is supposed to have received the ten commandments. This site was selected after an extensive search over Asia and Africa for the highest, dryest spot that was reasonably accessible.

It was essential to find a mountain in a desert where the water vapor in the air is at a minimum, as water absorbs radiation, especially at the lower edge of the spectrum, even into the invisible infrared. Also, minute dust particles scatter radiation, so the scientists sought a location with a minimum of dust. Mount St. Katherine best satisfied all these requirements.

The observations consist in measuring the amount of heat from the sun which falls at any given time upon a hypothetical black object the size of a cubic centimeter, placed at the edge of the earth's atmosphere. Since the measurement must be taken on the earth's surface, allowance is made for the complications resulting from passage through the atmosphere.

This patient work, conducted throughout the world under the supervision of Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian, is leading to important conclusions concerning variations in the earth's weather. Progress is reported to have been especially rapid during the past year. Since the meteorological conditions caused by solar variations over any part of the earth may have far-reaching effects, the data to come from Mount St. Katherine are expected to be of great value.

THOSE FOOTBALL SCORES.

On Saturday night at our house
there's nothing ever done Except to get the football scores and read them one by one:
It's "How did Army go today?" and
"What of Tuskegee?"
"What happened up at Harvard?"
and "Who's heard from Trinity?"
Tho' Roosevelt and Litvinov engage in great debate
And all of Europe talk of war and sing a hymn of hate,
The only thing that worries dad and ma, and Fred and Sue,
Is what occurred at Upsala and what score old Purdue?

II.

The NRA may totter and appear about to fall,
The President may battle with his back against the wall;
The dollar may go plunging to a new and all-time low,
But these alone are matters of which father wants to know:
"What happened at the Eli bowl?
What happened to Tulane?
Did Pittsburgh win the game today? What happened up in Maine?
What was the score by Holy Cross?
Say, what of Hiwasee?
Did Swarthmore do so well today and what of U. of P.?"

III.

The farmers they may stage revolts and battle the police,
The Germans may leap to their arms and cry "The hell with peace!"
The Japs may threaten Uncle Sam and man their ships for war,
But nothing matters Saturday excepting "What's the score?"
It's "How about the Navy, boys?"
and "What did Fordham do?"
"What of the Duke and Bowdoin games?" "Can Princeton lick the Blue?"
"Who heard from Susquehanna yet?" "How fared old Notre Dame?"
"Has Boston College score come in?" . . . "How went St. Mary's game?"

IV.

"Vesuvius may blaze again and send its lava down
Upon the helpless people of a terror-stricken town!
A quake may hit the Western Coast and cause a mighty shake;
Chicago may slip off its base and fall into the lake,
But all the family demands to know without delay
Is what the final score was against
W. & J.
"Did Ithaca win out today?" and "How went V. P. I.?"
"Who's heard the score from Lebanon?" . . . "Did Oklahoma

Daily Talks About Books and Authors

Edna Ferber.

Unlike most of our leading American woman authors, Miss Ferber did not have a university education, nor did she have the privilege in her adolescence of studying and traveling in Europe. She was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., and was a high-school girl in Wisconsin. As a writer she was not precocious, but as an observer and chronicler she certainly was; also she supported herself at a tender age. When she was 17, she was a reporter on a daily newspaper in a small town, later widening that experience in Milwaukee and Chicago.

She began to write books of fiction in her early twenties; and while they had no great literary merit, they showed intellectual vitality and what is equally important, a sense of reality. In other words, she knew exactly what she was talking about.

The first novel that showed something more than entertainment was "Girls," which appeared in 1921. That story, which has transitional value in her career, has equal transitional value in showing the beginnings of the change in manners and fashions that followed the war.

"So Big," which appeared in 1924, won the Pulitzer Prize, and deserved it; it is an extraordinary study of mother and son—the mother being a heroine not merely in the fictional sense. Then came "Show Boat," which had a double success among readers and spectators. I did not know there were any show boats till I read the book. The season of 1932-1933 was notable for the successful play, "Dinner at Eight," which she wrote with George Kaufman, and the collection of brilliant short stories, "They Brought Their Women," which have the breath of life.

Tomorrow—Keats.

When the Frogs Chose a Stork as King, They Doomed Themselves to Be Eaten.

By Robert Quillen.

Persons with authority have launched a movement to purge the American bar of its criminal members.

The ordinary citizen feels little interest in the movement; but he should regard it as a matter of vital importance, for it may change the whole course of his life.

Lawyers shape the destiny of America as the potter shapes his clay.

That is not an exaggeration, but a simple statement of fact.

The Supreme Court, which has power to veto laws demanded by the people, is a body of lawyers.

With few exceptions, all judges are lawyers—and their rulings, made without the consent of the people, have the force of law.

More often than not the President is a lawyer, and he chooses lawyers to help and advise him.

Every Congress and every Legislature is dominated and controlled by lawyers.

And lawyers, in or out of office, control the affairs of every city in the land.

Perhaps this arrangement is fortunate. Perhaps lawyers are better qualified than other men to direct public affairs. In any case they are in fact rulers of the Nation, and to be a lawyer is to be one of the class that makes or breaks America.

In Europe and Asia, before the era of dictators, a prince born to rule was trained for his job. The ablest men of the nation labored early and late to build his mind and his character. He was trained in a hard school, for his job required unselfish devotion to the welfare of the state.

Our rulers have no such training. Their object in life, like that of their fellow citizens, is to make money. They are admitted to the bar—added to the ruling class—when they can answer certain questions concerning the law.

Most of them are college graduates. Some graduated from high school only. Some are unschooled and ignorant of all things except knavery.

As a class they are above the average, but that is not enough. Those who would be rulers should be subjected to the most rigid examination man can devise. In character and morality they should be above reproach.

The machinery of law has become so complicated that no man wronged by the powerful or falsely accused of wrong can hope for justice if he enters the courts without a professional advocate to plead his cause.

And people who live at the mercy of lawyers have a right to demand that the ruling class purge itself of petty knaves and puissant scoundrels.

Stewardship.

I once knew one who said to me,
"I merely hold my wealth in fee.
By the strange breeze of chance was blown
Riches I never dreamed to own
Into my lap—all, all unearned.
To gather it no hand I turned.
My father once a venture made
And was ten thousand times repaid;
Thus when he died, it fell to me
One of the town's rich men to be."

Always there hovered on his lip
A single word. 'Twas "stewardship,"
It lodged within his mind so deep
I'm sure it roused him oft from sleep.
So earnest was he and so weighed
With duty that he seemed afraid
Of pleasure and the comforts which
Are well afforded by the rich.
He gave great sums man's ills to mend,
But little on himself he'd spend.
The cheapest kind of clothes he wore;
Ate simple food. At every store
He entered, always for himself
He'd purchase from the shoddy shelf.
Friends laughed and clerks who knew his whim
And his great wealth made jest of him.
Stingy they thought him, since they could
Not know his passion to do good,
Nor guess the terrifying grip
Of that idea, "stewardship."

To church and charity he gave,
To hospitals men's lives to save;
To any dream or noble plan
Which might uplift his fellowman
His gifts were large, but thinking he
A faithful steward ought to be
The luxuries all mortals crave
Unto himself he never gave.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

THAT HOME boy of ours, Gen. Johnson, who went out West to make good, made a serious slip, instead, in his Des Moines speech. Somehow or another his statement that he found the agricultural sections so wholeheartedly behind the NRA that he reported to Mr. Roosevelt there was no need of his having made the trip smacks strongly of the optimism of a gentleman we had with us more than a decade ago, an optimism that just preceded his going out, in fact.

And it is an analogy that too many people will recall for it to do the general any good.

There were bombs bursting all around the general, figuratively if not literally, as he made his statement. On the outlying roads farmers were setting off dynamite and holding up their fellow farmers with shotguns.

* * * *

NOW what does this remind you of — three guesses? Roy Haynes, of course. He was our first prohibition commissioner and in no time at all developed the happy faculty of blandly saying that prohibition was being enforced as speakeasies and bootlegging sprang up all over the place.

Yes, sir, the commissioner would go out on a speaking tour and, with that angelic manner of his, assure the country that it was really amazing the way the people were cooperating with him. America had just become a desert, that's all. In all the land there was not a drink to be had. And as he spoke, frequently in a church, a bootlegger would be making a delivery next door.

It is probably an exaggeration, but I believe the commissioner went out of office without ever having seen a quart of bootleg gin.

Now comes the general in the same state of bliss. So high has the general geared his optimism, in fact, that he probably thought the dynamite and bombs were but pyrotechnic honors to his arrival in town, sort of like they fire 21 guns when the President comes around.

But if this slip on the general's part was unfortunate it does not follow that his boys back here have not been doing good work redistributing wealth while he is away. It is a tribute to the wealth-redistributing machinery that the general has set up, that it would work this efficiently in his absence. It means that the general has developed an organization of young wealth redistributors who can carry on after he has gone. We are assured a permanent, perpetual redistribution, so to speak.

THE neatest thing in the wealth-redistribution line that has been turned out in a long time is the dry cleaners' code. Ah, you have something here in such simplicity that all of us can understand just what is going on. We may not be able to follow some of the more academic pursuits of the wealth redistributors, but when they give us a dry cleaners' code they are down in the graded schools.

You can see very plainly here how the Rockefellers and Morgans and Wigginses are being put in their place. We will teach them yet to rake in all of the wealth of this land. It is easily apparent what we do to them in the dry cleaners' code. It will cost them, henceforth, at least $1 if not a $1.50 to get every one of their suits cleaned.

Of course, it will cost all of us that much to get our suits cleaned, but where we get at the vested interests is that they have more suits than we.

* * * *

I'LL bet Mr. Wiggins has 20. Now every time he takes them to the cleaner he will have to pay $10 or $15 more of his wealth than he used to—and this money will go for wages to the dry cleaners, which puts them closer to Mr. Wiggins in wealth than they have heretofore been.

Of course, this is the high purpose of the code. It will not work out in practice because Mr. Wiggins and Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Morgan have valets who will continue to do their cleaning and pressing for them.

But it is the principle of the thing that counts.

PRETORIAN GUARDS.

It is a commentary on our civilization to observe what one writer calls the "Wall Street Pretorian Guard" busily engaged in making pistol-shooting records in competition last week. Incidentally, says the New York Post, guards of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, also participating, proved exceptional ability to protect its masterpieces with firearms. More than 5,000 men comprise the total of bank and institution guards employed in this city to protect private property, and this number probably does not include numerous privately paid watchmen who serve many business houses.

The necessity for these elaborate protective forces is apparent enough, but it demonstrates the tremendous overload upon American life and business represented by rampant crime with which regular police forces have dealt badly or not at all.

AIR POWER.

Russia is training 3,000 aeronautical engineers a year, according to the London Daily Mail. It is equipping its forces with all-metal machines. Its strength is such that it is today one of the dominating powers in Europe and Asia. It can threaten India almost as easily as it can threaten Poland—a fact which it would be madness to ignore. Moreover, this Soviet air development is parallel to what is proceeding in every country except simple-minded Great Britain.

Middle Profit On Food Stuffs Reduced 1 Cent

Grower-Consumer Spread Still 9 Cents Above 1929 Figure.

The spread between the price received by the producer of food and and the price paid by the consumer was reduced slightly during October, Dr. Fred C. Howe, consumers' council for the Farm Administration, said yesterday. He added, however, that the spread still is much greater than in 1929.

Processors and distributors took 62 cents of the consumer's dollar on October 24, as compared with 63 cents on September 26, Howe said. In 1929 the spread was only 53 cents and on February 15 of this year it was 99 cents.

From February to October the farm price of 14 important foods increased 47 per cent, while the retail price increased only 20 per cent, the announcement said.

Bread prices, however, Howe said, are not following the general trend. Until a few weeks ago the average increase of bread prices could be fairly well explained by the increased cost of flour and other ingredients, he said. During the last few weeks, however, the margin between retail bread prices and cost of ingredients has been higher than it was early in 1933.

Foods on which calculations are based are beef, pork, lamb, chicken, eggs, whole milk, evaporated milk, butter, cheese, rice, potatoes, flour, bread and macaroni.

Driver Hitting 2 Girls Sought

Men Injured as Other Autos Collide With Trolley Cars.

Police yesterday and last night continued search for the hit-and-run driver who struck and seriously injured two 17-year-old girls at Sixteenth and Emerson streets northwest Monday evening.

The girls were Miss Jeanette Keller, 3800 New Hampshire avenue northwest, daughter of Daniel Keller, a Shipping Board accountant; and Miss Phyllis Brown, 825 Emerson street northwest, daughter of A. T. Brown, sales manager of Griffith-Consumers.

Both girls were treated at Walter Reed Hospital for possible skull fractures and internal injuries, and later were taken to Garfield Hospital.

When his automobile collided with a street car at Tenth and U streets northwest yesterday, Norman Sylvester, 35, 1322 Massachusetts avenue northwest, suffered cuts.

Lorenzo Murdock, 28, colored, received a sprained shoulder when the cab in which he was a passenger collided with a street car at Seventh and O streets northwest.

Los Angeles Man Saw Kidnaped Boy

Says Two Men Had Young Hart in Custody.

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 (AP).—District Attorney Buron Fitts said today a Los Angeles cafe man has identified newspaper photographs of Brooke L. Hart, supposedly kidnaped San Jose youth, as being those of a young man he saw in his cafe early last Saturday morning in company of two burly men who appeared to be keeping him in close custody.

William H. Pabst, president of the San Jose National Bank, and Victor A. Chargrin, attorney for Alex Hart, father of the missing youth, were here today. Hart is a director of the bank.

The Herald-Express said reports were current that Pabst and Chargrin had come here either to raise money or to contact the supposed kidnapers.

Tribal Corporations Proposed For Indian Land Management

Form of Self-Government Included in Plan for Congress.

American Indians will be accorded a measure of self-government so far as management of their land is concerned under a proposal to be presented to Congress, John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, said yesterday.

The plan includes returning to the Indians 7,000,000 acres of land which ordinarily would be sold at auction by the Government. It provides for formation of tribal corporations which would own the land and allot it to individual Indians for a life-time tenure.

Heretofore, individual Indians have been allotted small portions of land. On the death of the holder it usually is impractical to divide it among the heirs because the allotments are small and the heirs usually numerous. Thus the land has been passing into the hands of white persons.

Collier said the proposed corporations would own the land perpetually, dividing it among individuals according to their needs. On the death of a landholder his land would be turned over to other Indians, but the tribe would retain title.

Sleeping Son Slain By Dad's Revolver

Bartender Was Removing Pistol for Comfort.

St. Louis, Nov. 14 (AP).—Ralph Armstrong, bartender, accidentally shot and killed his 3-year-old son here today.

The boy was sleeping in his father's lap, beside his mother, in a dimly lighted dance hall. The father said he removed his revolver from the waistband of his trousers because it made the child uncomfortable.

As he pulled it out, the weapon was discharged, killing the boy and wounding Armstrong in the thigh.

Gambler Abduction Laid to Three Men

Trio Indicted at Chicago in Hackett Case.

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—True bills charging three men with kidnaping James Hackett, Blue Island gambler, for ransom, were reported voted today by the Cook County grand jury after Hackett appeared in the jury chambers with the State's attorney.

The trio named are Frank Souder, of Benton, Ill.; Gale Swolley, of Peoria, and Julian "Babe" Jones, of St. Charles. Kidnaping for ransom is a capital offense in Illinois, and no bail was fixed for the prisoners.

Souder and Jones were charged with abducting Hackett from the Navajo County Club in May, 1931, after which he paid $75,000 for his release. Swolley was named with the other two on the charge of kidnaping Hackett a second time last May. Hackett paid $1,500 that time.

Mine Election Seen as End Of Coal Strife

U. S. Labor Board Issues Rules for Workers' Vote Next Week.

Instructions for the conduct of workers' elections to determine who shall represent them in collective bargaining at steel industry owned bituminous mines of western Pennsylvania were issued yesterday by Chairman Robert F. Wagner of the National Labor Board.

The outcome of the elections, to be held next week, will determine whether the mines shall be unionized by the United Mine Workers of America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

Under the instructions issued by Wagner, every employe on the company pay roll on the day preceding cessation of work due to the strike will be entitled to vote. Workers in each mine will elect six representatives who can either be fellow employes or union representatives.

"With this fulfillment of the task laid before us by the President," Wagner, said, "we have every reason to believe a basis will result for sound labor relations in this heretofore strike-torn area."

Mrs. Nina Merryman has been re-elected president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Bladensburg Volunteer Fire Department. Mrs. Mary C. Doty has been chosen vice president, Miss Helen Stack, secretary, and Mrs. Magdaline Lohman, treasurer.

Pittsburgh's New Democratic Mayor Scorns Private Office

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14 (AP).—William N. McNair, Pittsburgh's first Democratic mayor-elect in a quarter of a century, is going to have his desk in the city hall lobby.

Announcing another phase of his "new deal" administration which goes into effect January 1, the trolley-riding McNair said today:

"I don't want that big office way up on the fifth floor. I want to be right out there where everybody can see me."

McNair also definitely put an end to reports he would purchase a limousine.

"What would I do with a limousine or a chauffeur?" he asked. "I've been riding street cars all this time and I'm going to keep it up."

The incoming executive is concentrating now on his proposed single tax plan.

His idea is have the Legislature place a 5-mills tax on land to 1 on buildings.

"This," he says, "would start a building boom and land owners would profit from their heavily-taxed land."

Sunday Liquor Sale Asked in Delaware

Dover, Del., Nov. 14 (AP).—Sale of liquor on Sundays and holidays between 11:30 a. m. and midnight is provided for in a proposed amendment to the liquor control law introduced today in the House of Representatives by Robert Hopkins, Democrat.

The law now prohibits Sunday and holiday sale and sale between midnight and 9 a. m., week days, but under the Hopkins bill it would be prohibited only between the hours of 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. on week days.

Another proposed amendment would fix the license fee for the sale of alcoholic liquors in a tavern at $100, the same as for beer.

A third bill would require an applicant for a liquor license to be a resident of the county two years and of the State three years.

2 Convicted Slayers Saved From Gallows

Denver, Nov. 14 (AP).—Gov. E. C. Johnson has commuted to life imprisonment the death sentences of Candelario Montoya, Jose Saiz and Roy Vigil, convicted of the murder of George Arnold, rancher. They were scheduled to hang Saturday.

The youths were born in the United States of Mexican parentage Friends had asked that their convictions be set aside and that the Federal District Court take jurisdiction because citizens of Mexican descent were barred from the jury which convicted them.

Recount in Cincinnati Gives Charter Victory

Cincinnati, Nov. 14 (AP).—Candidates of the Cincinnati City Charter Committee won control of the powerful city council again today, with five of nine seats in their possession at the close of the sixteenth count in the proportional representation system of tabulation.

Repelling the most stubborn Republican drive for control since charter government was instituted in 1926, the charterites in winning assured the reelection of Russell Wilson as mayor and the retention of C. A. Dykstra as city manager.

Lindy Decides To Fly Ocean In Easy Stages

Return Via Bermuda and Azores May Complete Airline Data.

Caldelas de Tuy, Spain, Nov. 14 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh said today he is considering flying across the middle Atlantic by stages as a continuation of his aerial survey of the north Atlantic.

He will not fly nonstop, he said, and it was indicated that he may follow the route originally mapped by the late Capt. Alan Winslow and followed in reverse last summer by the Italian seaplane squadron under the command of Italo Balbo.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, forced down near here by fog yesterday on a flight from Santona, Spain, to Lisbon, planned to continue the journey tomorrow if weather permits.

River Dredged for Take-Off.

Lindbergh today supervised the dredging of the Minho River to make possible the take-off of his seaplane. The river is shallow and rocky.

Spanish sailors and Portuguese fishermen helped him. The plane was moored to a tree on the river bank opposite the summer home of former Premier Pirmerita de Castro of Portugal in the Portuguese town of Valenca do Minho.

The colonel examined the motors, refueled and boarded a gunboat searching for a take-off place today.

The Lindberghs stayed aboard their seaplane last night. They were entertained by village authorities today.

Island Stops Predicted.

Aviation officials believed Lindbergh might halt at Bermuda and the Azores on the return flight. In this way he will have checked flying conditions in both directions across the Northern and Southern routes over the North Atlantic.

Thousands of messages arrived for them today from all parts of the world.

Municipal councillors of Valenca do Minho said they planned to name a street after Lindbergh.

Renwick S. McNiece, United States Consul in Vigo, Spain, denied reports that he had said the Lindberghs would fly nonstop from Lisbon to New York.

"I know nothing and have said nothing regarding such a project," Mr. McNiece said.

Spend Day Sightseeing.

Valenca do Minho, Portugal, Nov. 14 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh remained aboard their seaplane tonight following a busy day of sightseeing.

He refused offers of hospitality by the local town consul.

The Lindberghs visited the Caldelas de Tuy Cathedral and other spots of interest on both sides of the frontier and expressed themselves as delighted with the quaintness of the nearby villages.

Fraud Charged In Managing Chicago Bank

Suit by Woman Demands Accounting for City's Largest Firm.

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP)—Suit for accounting of the assets of the Continental-Illinois Bank & Trust Co., Chicago's largest bank, and asking that its officers and directors be held liable for losses alleged to be due to illegal and fraudulent mismnagement, was filed in superior court today.

James R. Leavell, president; Stanley Field, retired chairman, and all the officers and directors were named defendants. The complainant was Mrs. Wilhelmina Grubey.

Mrs. Grubey brought suit as owner of 30 shares of bank stock and in behalf of her incompetent husband, George W. Grubey, now in an insane asylum. She is conservator for his estate, which owns 270 shares.

Specific allegations were:

That the bankers, since February 1, 1928, have allowed exorbitant salaries, bonuses and commissions to officers and directors.

That $20,000,000 was lost through speculative loans to George M. Reynolds, director and former chairman, or to corporations or syndicates he controlled or was interested in. Reynolds is a defendant.

That the embezzlement of more than $2,000,000 by Walter Wolf, convicted former employe, was due to failure of the officers to establish proper supervision.

That other losses were incurred by mismanagement of the affiliated Continental-Illinois company.

Chase Officers Sued.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Subpenas and complaints were being served today on directors and former directors of the Chase National Bank in an action to recover $100,000,000.

The suit, instituted by holders of 1,000 shares of the bank's stock, is directed against Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the bank, and 135 others.

The complaint charges the officials entered into "a series of conspiracies for their own personal profit, which have resulted in enormous loss to stockholders."

Pieces of Eight — The Prisoner Becomes Nurse — By Charles B. Driscoll

Bo'sun Hands, shot through the knee by his master, Blackbeard, was carried to the ship's magazine room. He suffered severely. No doctor. Jim Blake, ship's carpenter, brought tools. "We'll hack off that there splintered spar in a jiffy," he said.

"No!" shouted Hands, sitting up. "Ye don't scuttle a ship because she's got a bit of paint scraped off her bows, do ye? I won't have it!" The men tried to hold him. "Get out!" he cried, seizing a pistol and pointing it at a powder barrel. They ran.

When they were gone, the old bo'sun painfully climbed down from his improvised bed and dragged himself down the companionway to the door of the cabin where Prudence was held prisoner. He pounded upon the door, weakly calling for help.

As the door opened poor old Hands fell into the cabin, where he had served and counseled the lovely Prudence so often since the beginning of the piratical voyage. The girl quickly set about bathing the wounded knee with water.

Roosevelt Gets U.S. Pay Appeal

Justice for Workers Urged at Conference.

Restoration of the Federal pay cut was urged by officers of the National Federation of Federal Employes at a conference with President Roosevelt yesterday.

Luther C. Steward, federation president, and Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary, reported the President was interested in the welfare of Government workers.

The visitors told the President salaries should be restored to the former level and made permanent. They said employes' morale would be improved if uncertainty concerning their future was removed. Steward insisted justice demanded pay-cut restoration.

Strengthening of the merit system was requested. They asked a greater proportion of appointments be made from Civil Service Commission lists.

Busy Bee

He Must Work for Honey, Also Works to Sting.

Bees actually go out of their way to inflict a sting.

In addition to causing pain, it's really work for the bee, according to a report by R. E. Snodgrass, noted American entomologist, issued yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

Approximately 22 muscles are brought into action with every sting, it was disclosed, and a queen bee works even harder when using her stinger.

Snodgrass discovered that three separate sets of movements are involved in the sting mechanism. The first accomplishes the outward thrust of the stinging shaft; the second, the depression of the shaft, and the third, the movements of the lancets which drive the sting further into the flesh of the victim.

Fays Win Lawsuit Over Son's Picture

Artist's $1,000 Claim for Painting Denied.

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 (AP).—A judgment favoring Barbara Stanwyck, movie actress, and her director husband, Frank Fay, was handed down by Municipal Judge Leo Aggeler today in the $1,000 suit against them by John Decker to collect for painting a portrait of the couple's 2-year-old son, Dion.

Decker contended the Fays commissioned him to paint the portrait. They said Decker gave it to them without charge with the understanding their son would sit for a portrait when he was older.

Witnesses in the trial variously estimated the painting to be worth the price Decker asked, and as low as $3.50.

Today there was a conference of historians in preparation for historical day Thursday.

After luncheon the daughters were guests of the Naval Academy, being taken on a tour of the buildings and grounds.

Touhy, Sharkey Are Identified In Hamm Trial

Dentist, Man Who 'Likes to Watch People Dig,' Point Out Pair.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 14 (U.P.)—A dentist who studies facial constructions and a window trimmer who "likes to watch people dig wells" identified two men today as members of a gang which kidnaped William Hamm, jr., last summer for $100,000 ransom.

The dentist and the window trimmer testified at the trial of Roger Touhy and four members of his gang on charges of violating the so-called "Lindbergh" law by taking a kidnaping victim from one State to another.

Daniel Rush, 25, the window trimmer, pointed out Willie Sharkey as driver of the automobile in which Hamm was taken away last June 15.

Dr. Horance Labissoniere, the dentist, pointed to Touhy himself as the man who left a ransom note in a drug store.

Rush, a surprise witness, said he liked to watch workmen dig wells and during his lunch hour, June 15, watched some men doing this kind of labor. While he loitered he saw two men kidnap Hamm. Rush said Sharkey drove the automobile.

Dr. Labissoniere said he remembered Touhy because his profession led him to study faces. While in a drug store in June, he said, he saw Touhy there and noted Touhy's hard-set facial expression. A short time later a ransom note was found in a telephone booth in the store.

Only one of the four men on trial remain to be identified in court. He is Gus Schaeffe. The fourth defendant, Eddie McFadden, previously was identified by Hamm, although Hamm later qualified this identification.

Beware the Cough or Cold That Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (Adv.).

Night Resorts Present Many New Features

Supper Clubs Offer Array of Talent, From Solo Artists to Revue.

It is a gesture of some importance to a pleasure-loving Capital, inured to the glamour of important "first nights," that Peter Borras' Madrillon Restaurant makes this week.

Prompted, no doubt, by the thought that history ought to repeat itself—even if it does not always do so—the Madrillon this week offers as the outstanding star of its floor show Miss Bettie MacDonald, former Ziegfeld beauty, who has appeared in many of the productions of the "Old Master" which had their premieres in this city. The Madrillon engagement, however, marks Miss MacDonald's debut "on the floor."

For all the huzzahs about her "orchidaceousness," Miss MacDonald, oddly enough, came to America not to be glorified by the late Flo Ziegfeld, but to glorify the dramatic creations, to the best of her ability, of Eugene O'Neil, Philip Barry and other contemporary dramatists.

Thus she studied long and arduously at the Jesse Bonstelle Dramatic School in Detroit, alma mater of Ann Harding and a representative line of other dramatic actors and actresses.

But destiny seemed to have other cards up its sleeve, for no sooner did Ziegfeld lay eye on Miss MacDonald at a "Follies" rehearsal some five years ago (to which she had gone to meet Ned Wayburn to study dancing) than he engaged her practically "on the spot." She reported for rehearsal next morning.

Miss MacDonald's appearance at the Madrillon, however, affords an opportunity to see a Ziegfeld charmer at closer range than across the footlights.

Change in Policy.

With the announcement of an immediate change of price policy at the Club Michel, No. 1 Thomas Circle, Walter Von Herbulis also announces his gala new Broadway Floor Revue, starring those popular dance artists, Scott and Douglass. This will be the third appearance of the dance team at the Michel in the last two seasons, a remarkable tribute to their ability.

SCOTT AND DOUGLASS.

Mildren Bragdon, who recently was co-starred with Lester Allen, is winning much applause nightly for her sweet voice. Charlie Wright has some peppy new songs and also is the personable master of ceremonies and introduces other acts in a revue which is stated to be one of the best to appear at the popular Thomas Circle supper club.

Walter Von Herbulis, director, states that the new policy will mean additional employment at the club.

Talent at Height-Ho.

Autumnal nights are increasing the popularity of the Heigh-Ho Club, Pete Macias' own night spot on Connecticut avenue at O street.

Ramos and America, continental dance team, are the principal floor attraction this week. The pair lately appeared at the Hotel Pierre, in New York City, and the Westchester Country Club. They execute several routines but are especially noted for the tango.

Hidden talent in the ranks of Pete's dance orchestra seems continually to loom into view. Aside from Marty Rubin, principal vocalist, there is Jimmy Nichols, the boy who sings like Rudy Vallee; the two piano numbers, by Burrus Williams and Don Shook, and soulful strumming of the banjo by Jimmy Harris.

There are always celebrities from every walk of life at the Heigh-Ho. Guy Lombardo and many of his brothers playing at a local theater have been represented every night since opening of their engagement. Lee Wiley, the radio songstress, was a recent surprise visitor and delighted with several songs. On such occasions, Pete keeps the club open an extra hour or two past the 3 a. m. set for week nights and 4 a. m. for Saturdays.

An Imported Revue.

This week the Shoreham Hotel offers for its supper dance entertainment an array of stars equal to any ever assembled in such a revue in Washington. Beginning with the performance tonight the entertainment will be carried through Saturday night.

Pooshie-Pooshie, the mystic Hindoo necromancer, with his famous rope trick, has been continued for another week. As a magician this seer is said to rank with the best.

Winona, the feature dancer, from the Roxy Theater in New York, is scheduled to make her first appearance in this city. Bert Whaley, formerly barytone with Paul Whiteman's Orchestra, has been especially engaged to appear this week, as have Jose and Mona, a dance team which has just finished an engagement at the St. Moritz Hotel, New York. Grant and Rosalie are here direct from a successful European tour.

The dance music will be furnished by Maxim Lowe's Shoreham Hotel Orchestra, directed by Barnee.

Sisters Held Over.

Singing, dancing and clowning their way into the hearts of hundreds of entertainment hungry Washington folk, who last week visited the new Hangar Club, the Stevens Sisters became so popular that they are being held over to headline the new floor show for the current week.

Throwing all restraint to the winds, Ivy and Berenice Stevens are a pair of "perfect fools"—two rather delectable fools, it might be added.

Berenice, the younger, excels at and delights in imitations of the great of showdom. Greta Garbo, Joe Penner, Will Mahoney—all spring into being through her cleverness. And you must come up and see her "Mae West" number. She even has the figure!

Charley Dawson and his 150-mile an hour Musical Pilots have gotten away for a great take-off with those Hangar Club patrons, who prefer to spend the evening dancing.

Joan Moss, mistress of ceremonies, provides an added treat with her rendition of late song hits, specializing in the bluer numbers.

An Old Landmark.

Now that prohibition is certain of extinction many of the old familiar places are throwing the musty rooms open, shining up the "ol' bar-rail," polishing the windows and setting out to reestablish that old "familiar landmark" atmosphere. Among the first to step out in this respect is one of the best known places of its kind, Hall's Famous Corner, at Seventh and K streets southwest.

This famous restaurant was established in 1885 by the then Rector of the South, Frank P. Hall, and has continued to remain in the family for over half a century. Its reopening is marked by the same atmosphere, the original fixtures, including the 100-foot bar, reputed to be the longest bar in this section of the country, the same famous taproom and original time-worn tapestries and railings.

While there is no floor show at Hall's, something of the old-time musical tradition of the place was revived for the opening by "Happy" Walker and one of his ace bands. Mr. Walker needs no introduction to Washington.

Former Opera Star.

A personality unique among stars of supper-show entertainment is boasted this week by The Troika.

Valia Valantinova, mezzo-soprano with an international reputation, is a native of Oofa, Russia. She started her musical career at an early age, getting her first lessons from the choirmaster of the local church. In a few years Valia took up her studies in St Petersburg, later graduating with honors.

VALIA VALENTINOVA.

After a tour of her native land with successful appearances in concert and opera Miss Valantinova found herself in Harbin, China. She also appeared in the principal cities of Japan and later crossed the ocean and started on a grand tour in this country. In 1928, when the Russian Grand Opera Company was organized in New York to produce Russian Opera, Miss Valantinova was given principal roles and won the acclaim of the outstanding critics of the metropolis. In "Boris Godunoff," Moussorgsky's great opera, Miss Valantinova played the important role of Marina in company with the incomparable Feodor Chaliapin.

Atlanta, Nov. 14 (AP).—Frank Doughman, counsel for Al Capone, today notified the district attorney's office he probably would present his client's second petition for a writ of habeas corpus to Federal court tomorrow.

He said the petition would argue Capone's trial on charges of income tax evasion was barred by the statute of limitations.

Princess Is 21

She Gets 5-10 Millions and Has Party.

New York, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—America's second richest girl, Princess Alexis Mdivani, the former Barbara Hutton, today became of age and received her one-third share in the enormous fortune amassed by the late F. W. Woolworth in 5 and 10 cent stores.

To mark her twenty-first birthday, the princess was given a party tonight at the home of her father, Franklyn L. Hutton. Her personal fortune is estimated at $20,000,000.

The princess, who is beautiful as well as wealthy, returned from Europe last week with her new husband. Tonight's party served the purpose of introducing Prince Alexis formally to New York society.

Chamber Backs College Bouts In School Gyms

Executive Committee Is Latest to Approve Boxing Request.

Additional and unexpected support was given collegiate boxing in high school gymnasiums yesterday when the executive committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce decided to approve the proposal.

The chamber's board of directors last week announced they could not approve the plan on the basis of information then at hand.

Yesterday's meeting was called after additional information was presented. The committee concluded that the application of Columbus University to use the McKinley High School gymnasium for intercollegiate boxing could not be denied without discriminating against this institution, since other local colleges have been allowed to use the gymnasiums for other sports.

A resolution, adopted by Victory Post of the American Legion, also urged use of the school. A communication was sent to the Board of Education seeking support.

The executive committee action followed approval of the plan Monday by directors of the Washington Board of Trade. The Federation of Citizens Associations is now the only large civic organization opposing the Columbus University request.

The board of education will vote on the application this afternoon.

Foreign Policy Declared Key To Prosperity

Wallace Tells Farmers U.S. Must Decide on Program.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 14 (AP).—Secretary Wallace tonight asked that America take a position either for reducing tariffs or curbing production or a compromise between the two and be prepared to stick to its decision for from 10 to 15 years.

In an address, which had White House approval, Wallace told farmers and business men at a banquet opening the corn hog production control program in Indiana that the Nation should make an early but deliberate decision as to its foreign policy.

Listening in silence and interrupting only once to laugh at a quip, the audience gave the Secretary a tremendous ovation as he completed his address.

The silence with which the address was heard from start to finish was broken only when the Secretary criticized the "God sakers" who came to Washington.

"I mean those people who are always saying 'For God's sake, Mr. Secretary, do this or that,'" he said.

Adjustments and a planned program will be essential whether the policy adopted is internationalism, nationalism or a combination of the two, he said, visualizing a standard of living "two or three times that we had in 1929," as within the Nation's reach should it pursue a definite plan.

"The important thing," the Secretary of Agriculture said, "once we have fully debated and understood the issues from a long-time point of view, is that we follow out the policy steadfastly and firmly in all its implications even though certain people are hurt.

"If we follow the National program, we must resolutely plan to keep 50,000,000 acres of land out of use."

He asserted "it is exceedingly important that business men never again take as large a percentage of the National income for profits as they did in 1929," adding:

"When the total capital of the country receives more than modest return, it interferes with the circuit flow of prosperity.

"To get this principal firmly fixed in our minds is more important than to pillory such individuals as have testified before the Senate Finance Committee as to the heartless way in which they betrayed the public and their own better selves in order to make a few million dollars.

"We need a new type of business man who is willing to help in working out the national or international plans, whichever they may prove to be and who is willing to devote his talents to bringing about a fair, workable relationship between the income of labor, the income of agriculture, and at the same time receive for his services only a small return on captial and a modest salary. If the new deal means anything, it means subordination of capital rights and property rights to human rights."

He asserted that "if we finally go all the way toward nationalism, it may be necessary to have compulsory control of marketing, licensing of plowed fields and base and surplus quotas for every farmer, for every product, for each month in the year.

Catharine Kelly And Mother Go To New Prison

Women Will Serve Life Together for Urschel Kidnaping.

In accordance with the desire which Catharine Kelly, wife of George ("Machine Gun") Kelly, screamed out when she was sentenced to life imprisonment, the desperado's wife and her mother are going to the same Federal prison.

Their proximity, however, will not be due to kindly consideration on the part of authorities. When they find themselves under the same roof, they can thank a new Federal prison policy of concentrating women "lifers" at a new penitentiary.

Following her conviction in the Urschel kidnaping trial at Oklahoma City, the defiant Catharine was sent to the Cincinnati workhouse. Her mother was incarcerated in the Shelby County Penal Farm at Memphis, Tenn.

Both to Be Transferred.

Yesterday the Department of Justice announced that both Catharine and her mother, Mrs. Ora Shannon, of Paradise, Tex., are being transferred to the newly constructed detention prison at Milan, Mich.

Following her conviction she burst into one of her characteristic rages. Shouting threats, she declared she had plenty of friends "who would come and get me if I said the word." Then she asserted that "if I'm with mother, I won't want to escape."

Authorities sent her to the Cincinnati Workhouse, which holds a contract to care for Federal prisoners, and her mother to the Memphis Penal Farm.

Yesterday, with a police escort, Catharine was taken to the Milan Prison. It was expected her mother would be on her way by today.

Informed about Catharine's wish to be with her mother, Bates said that "we certainly aren't doing this for the convenience of Mrs. Kelly and her mother."

Mrs. Kelly at Milan.

Milan, Mich., Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Catharine Kelly, who, with her husband, George "Machine Gun" Kelly, is serving a life sentence for the Charles F. Urschel kidnaping, took up her residence in the women's section of the new Federal prison here tonight.

Brought to the prison late today from the women's workhouse in Cincinnati, Mrs. Kelly was placed in a quarantine cell on her arrival.

The warden said tonight no decision had been reached concerning Mrs. Kelly's duties. "Everybody here is assigned to a task, and she will do something," he said. There are no factory units at the prison, and most of the duties are incident to the farming of land about the building, working in the shops, kitchens and laundry in connection with the prison.

English Military Scandal Revived

Lawmakers Argue Guilt of Convicted Officer.

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—The British army scandal of Lieut. Baillie-Stewart, "the officer in the tower," was revived in the House of Commons today.

Alfred Duff Cooper announced to the House that the young Seaforth Highlander officer, whose imprisonment in the Tower of London last spring created nation-wide interest, had "made a full confession of his guilt soon after his conviction."

This was disputed by J. McGovern, Labor member from Glasgow, who declared Baillie-Stewart denied any confession. Baillie-Stewart, convicted by court-martial of violation of the official secrets act, is serving five years.

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 (AP).—A voluntary bankruptcy petition was filed in Federal Court today by Nina Wilcox Putnam Elliot, writer, who listed her liabilities as $12,136.01 and total assets of $1,977.

Among liabilities was an income tax claim of the Government for $323.98 and a county tax claim of $64.50.

U. S. Aid Warns Austria Against Anti-Semitism

Asserts Nation Will Lose American Sympathy by Persecution.

Vienna, Nov. 14 (AP).—The United States intervened informally but forcefully in the Austrian situation today and warned the Austrian people, through Minister George H. Earle 3d, that if they encourage anti-Semitism they will lose American sympathy and help.

"Ninety-five per cent of all Americans," Mr. Earle said, "are either fugitives from persecution or descendants of people who crossed the ocean because of religious or racial persecution.

"They can not cooperate sympathetically with a country where people are persecuted on account of birth."

Visited Provinces.

Mr. Earle told newspapermen he had communicated this friendly warning in all provinces of Austria during a motor tour he started October 28 to get acquainted with the country.

A foreign office spokesman pointed out that the Dollfus government is in the very midst of efforts to suppress anti-Semitism. No papers had published Earle's remarks tonight, however.

Warns Vienna Press.

After the interview with American correspondents, Mr. Earle repeated his remarks to the Vienna press, adding:

"It is up to Austrians themselves to decide on their politics.

"It is the prerogative of Americans, however, to give their sympathy to those who deserve it.

"And it is not very likely that sympathy will be found in America for any country in which such persecutions on racial or religious grounds prevail."

Brokers Fight Suit for Stock Market Losses

Fenner, Beane & Ungerleider Scout Plea Based on Tip Naming President.

Twenty-two men and women, trading as the stock brokerage firm of Fenner, Beane & Ungerleider, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to dismiss a suit filed against them by Arthur R. Donovan, who asked damages of $5,883.60.

Donovan filed suit October 7, charging he had been persuaded to transfer his stock account from one firm to that of the defendant. He alleged that representations as to the partnership held by Curtis B. Dall, son-in-law of President Roosevelt, and Senator Elmer Thomas, Oklahoma, who was a patron, assured customers of more accurate information regarding market turns.

Donovan charged he lost the amount he sued for. He claimed he had been told that Senator Thomas would have the President put into effect the inflation bill if the market went down.

The defendants yesterday contended "it does not appear that the statements concerning Curtis B. Dall or Senator Thomas had any relation to plaintiff's losses." Action will be had on the dismissal petition in five days.

Santa Cruz, Calif., Nov. 14 (AP).—Outlining the prosecution case in the trial of Miss Freda Weltz, charged with the killing here last September of Francis J. M. Grace, member of a prominent shipping family, District Attorney J. Frank Murphy today told the jury of eleven men and one woman "absolute premeditation" would be proved.

Murphy stated he would show Miss Weltz registered at a hotel adjacent to the large Grace residence here and would introduce two peace officers and Grace's butler to testify that immediately after the shooting Miss Weltz said she had planned long in advance to stand the consequences of the act.

Archy the Cockroach Jumps Down on Typewriter Keys Again.

Don Marquis has been watching Archy the Cockroach tap out free verse once again. Archy, you remember, has to make a running leap onto a typewriter key to make it print. As he can't manage the shift key at the same time, his manuscripts are all in lower-case. But his wit in what might be called the cockroach-approach to life is in no way marred. His latest work is called: "Archy's Life of Mehitabel," just published by Doubleday Doran under Don Marquis' godfathership. Here is a sample:

a man thinks he amounts to a lot
but to a mosquito a man is

Julian Street has just been made a director in the wine-dealing firm of Bellows & Co., New York—obviously a reward for his writing about wines with such gusto and authority during the era to close December 6.

So many Chinese foods were described by Nora Waln in "House of Exile" that people began to write in for the recipes and to ask for a book of them. It turns out that she has a notebook full, but for the time being she is first allowing her sister to try fricassee of duck and bird's-nest soup on occidental palates. Her sister is manager of the restaurant in the Tate Gallery, London.

Leonard Nason has forsaken Boston for the winter and gone to New York, where he will write a novel, a set of short-stories, and adapt "Chevrons" and "Among the Trumpets" for the radio. He also has a hand in the production of his story, "Rodney," which RKO have been filming at Fort Myer recently with Walter Huston.

Roaming Essays.

A book of essays, "Pleasures and Palaces," by Frances and Gertrude Warner; Houghton Mifflin, $1.75.

The art of the essay is too little practiced by wrifers today. The sugar coat of fiction must be spread over everything in order to attract readers who lack the time, inclination and background for more serious literature. This marks in itself a degeneration on the part of the reading public, a perilous state indeed for letters. Because without the appreciative reader what profit or progress may come to the author?

Therefore admiration must be felt for the courageous author who pushes aside the easy fruits of fiction for the difficult flowers of the essay. The present authors know their art well. They combine wit with whimsical humor, and throw in for good measure a spicy seasoning of wisdom.

If any one should think that the essay is necessarily dull, a few extracts from some of the essays in this book will dispel the notion almost automatically. Apartment dwellers will relish the subtle humor of these remarks on "Apartment Etiquette," apropos of cleaning it:

"First you move the baby carriage out of the small foyer (which at home we would call the top step) and put it in the living room. This enables us to get the vacuum cleaner out of the coat closet.

"Clean the foyer thoroughly (thirty seconds) and, keeping always to the right of the baby carriage, proceed through the living room, the foyer, bedroom (round trip three minutes, thirty seconds), return through foyer and living room, left (two minutes) and replace cleaner and baby buggy. Total ten minutes. That is against ten days at home.

One the essays entitled "Acorns" concerns Washington. The authors comment, "The Capital City, it will be remembered, is lined with oaks. The oak is to Washington what the elm is to New Haven, the horse-chestnut to Paris, the linden to Berlin, the palm to Miami, the pine to Maine."

Yet the authors could find no acorns in Washington, and were deeply puzzled as to how the oaks managed to come into existence without some acorns scattered here and there. Finally, they formed a goodly supply out near the Dump.

The particular author who wrote the essay on acorns then reasoned within herself as she strode homeward: "Is it not ever thus? Although we behold the capitals of the world and the glories thereof, do we not every one of us pursue our acorns? Did not I once raise heaven and earth for a certain etching of a gargoyle that I wanted in the very shadow of Notre Dame? I was discussing this topic later with a traveled friend, and she told me that certain of her chief regrets in life might be entitled, 'Acorns I have left behind me.' One of her acorns, she said, was a plaid Scotch blanket that she did not buy in Glasgow. And when she mentioned that, I remembered a damask tablecloth with a rose-and-thistle pattern that I did not buy in Brussels, and a pretty little pewter pitcher with a cover of the variety called a 'tappithen,' that I did not collect in Warwick; and I remembered how I had hurried my mother-in-law across a London bridge at twilight and away from a tempting window where slippers with a fur border were displayed in a sale of oddments. I told her we had no time to lose, and that the exchange would be better in Paris and she agreed. But in Paris we found no such cozy slippers with fur-lined edges and quaint toes. They were a typical pair of acorns, those London slippers, and in my remorseful imagination I can see them still."

Alas, all of us have had our acorns at times. Those who care for clever writing will do well to read this book.

First Lady's Work Program Is Strenuous

Roosevelt Energy Expended in Constant Stream of Activities.

By Martha Dalrymple.

The amount of work that can be accomplished in the daily routine of one First Lady of the Land is sufficient to put a whole brigade of fast-working newspaper gals right out of the running.

The young women of the press conference sat up breathlessly yesterday and listened while Mrs. Roosevelt herself ran over for their benefit her daily program. It contained a list of activities which left them amazed—even as it exhausted the lead in the reportorial pencils.

In the brief outline no hour was unaccounted for, from yesterday morning, when she arrived by the early train from New York, until Friday morning, when she again leaves Washington.

To Mrs. Roosevelt it is no mere "list of engagements." Each hour she has allotted to a person, a cause or an idea is an hour of deep seriousness to her.

She knows what the subject of the interview, the speech or the request will be. She is interested in it. And she has prepared herself for it.

No welfare cause is too remote to investigate, no small child's pitiful plea for a stable of Shetland ponies or a 5-cent rag doll is too insignificant for Mrs. Roosevelt to, to laugh at, and to remember. Laughing gaily, as often at herself as at others, she goes through her 15-hour days happily and efficiently, displaying the phenomenal and traditional Roosevelt energy.

Her day yesterday, after she got off the train from New York, began with a brief survey of the White House housekeeping problems. With her secretary she went over her mail, settled on her engagements for the week, and put the finishing touches on plans for the first State dinner, which is to be held Thursday night.

From 11 to 12 she held her press conference. At noon she met a close friend of Mrs. Isabelle Greenway. For luncheon she entertained the wives of Justices of the Supreme Court. From 4 until dinner time she was busy with tea and "at- home" callers. For dinner there were several guests, each of whom is an authority on some subject in which Mrs. Roosevelt is interested.

Today she has three appointments with people who have various welfare or benefit projects to discuss with her. Wednesday afternoon she goes to a benefit concert and entertains for dinner Eddie Dowling and Lillian Gish, movie stars, who will show their new picture.

Thursday, except for a few casual appointments, she has nothing to do but entertain the Cabinet members at dinner, and 250 guests later at a state reception.

Friday she leaves for New York and Groton, where she will visit her son, John.

In the meantime, she is receiving daily reports on the progress of the Woman's Crusade for the Mobilization of Human Needs; planning a White House meeting for Federal workers in the new Federal women's employment relief program, and making plans for development of the hospital and clinic at Warm Springs, Ga.

What's in Fashion?

Rich Color, Bright Metal Seen on Informal Evenings

Directed by Amos Parrish

Dresses of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington in all the better class shops.

New York, Nov. 14.—It's fun to hear the folk who have a finger in the fashion-pie talk unofficially. As they did at lunch in one of New York's old-atmosphere, come-and-chat hotels. "I like dinner clothes best of all this year," one tweed-and-fedora young person decided.

She meant the informal dinner dresses that are also cocktail party, theater and "don't dress" costumes. Informal, yet somehow they often have a more elegant look than the most radiant evening frocks.

Long Dolman Sleeves.

Maybe it's something about the long, dolman sleeves that many of them wear . . . making your least gesture graceful and dramatic. And the majority of them are long sleeved, of course, whether they're one piece with high or half-way low back or jacketed in the blouse-like effect over a regular evening bodice.

The colors and fabrics, too, are fashion at its richest. Soft Canton in lustrous medium green. That mossy crepe that looks like uncut velvet, in ruby red or sapphire blue. Mossy sheer crepes that don't look sheer in fuchsia red or purplish reds. Velvet in black, with gleaming metal touches.

Contrasting Tops.

Dresses with contrasting tops are every bit as effective as the one-color fashions. (Witness the dress sketched.) These usually have black skirts and pale rather than vivid color tops. Though you see some two-tone dresses, in combination such as blackberry and raspberry or wine and brown with light rust.

Many of these pale tops are threaded over with a metal embroidery. Some entire tops or entire sleeves of gleaming lame contrast richly with black skirts. One of the very newest of these dresses has metal and black striped lame with a black skirt. And if that isn't fit for a queen, or anyway a movie star, we don't know what it is!

A Double Squeeze.

The importance of having a sound conception of double squeeze execution is suggested by the fact that I have heard of four or five hands involving this stratagem which have been played within the last few weeks by a small group who frequent two or three New York City clubs. In each case it was necessary to employ the squeeze in order that the contract might be made.

Among those I have seen recently is one played in a game composed of several of the more prominent younger experts who convene daily. By aggressive bidding one pair reached a Slam contract, which was justified because there were two or three different fortunate breaks, any one of which would have meant that the contract would be fulfilled. In the final analysis the squeeze proved to overcome the necessity for depending upon either a finesse or a suit break.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 3 2 ♡ Q 7 5 2 ◇ A J 9 5 ♣ A J 8
♠ 9 7 ♡ J 10 9 8 ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ 9 4 3 2	N W E S	♠ Q J 10 ♡ 6 4 ◇ K Q 10 6 ♣ Q 10 7 5
	♠ A K 8 6 5 4 ♡ A K 3 ◇ 8 4 ♣ K 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1◇	Pass
2♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♠	Pass	3NT	Pass
4NT	Pass	5NT	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Knave of hearts, which South won with the Ace. Two rounds of spades showed that the suit had been divided 3-2, one of the breaks which was necessary. South led another spade, discarding a diamond from Dummy, and East had the lead. East now led the King of diamonds, and Dummy won the Ace. It seemed hardly likely that the heart suit would break, in view of the Opening, but if West held the only heart stopper on the fourth round, the squeeze should be a certainty, for it seemed very unlikely that East would lead the King of diamonds into Dummy's A-J-9 unless holding the Queen and Ten as well. In this case East would have the only diamond higher than South's eight, and West the only heart higher than Dummy's seven, so that neither of them, if holding his stopper, would be able to retain more than one club when the hand had been stripped to two cards, and Dummy's Knave of clubs would be established regardless of whether East or West held the Queen. South first tried for the heart break, of course, but when East showed out on the third round, he returned to his hand with the King of clubs and played out his three remaining trumps.

The squeeze was successful, as he had foreseen, and East was finally forced to unguard his Queen of clubs, which dropped on the Ace of clubs at the twelfth trick, establishing the Knave of clubs for the thirteenth.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South is playing this hand at four spades. In what manner can he avoid the loss of a trump trick?

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Buffet Supper, Swedish Style, A Novel Repast

Herring Salad and Meat Balls Mainstays of Menu.

A buffet supper is really a "help yourself" one, and since this idea of helping yourself is an old Swedish custom, let's make our buffet supper truly Swedish. You'll find it is a novel way of entertaining.

The smorgasbord, or first course of the Swedish meal, is always served in help-yourself fashion, so this is the part we want to borrow for the buffet supper. Literally, smorgas means bread and butter, and bord means table, so it is a bread and butter table.

Everything can be prepared in advance, even to setting the table, so at the last minute there is nothing to do but set out the food. You can bring a crowd in from the movies and almost before they have their wraps off have ready for them a supper they'll talk about for weeks.

A platter of cold meat neatly and attractively arranged carries out the Swedish idea of a bread and butter table. A slice of cold meat, two slices of bread, a little lettuce, butter creamed for easy spreading, and there you have the makings of sandwiches.

In Sweden, the "mainstays" of the smorgasbord are herring salad and meat balls. Even the meat balls may be partially prepared beforehand, so all that is necessary just before the supper is to reheat them. Here is a recipe for genuine Swedish meat balls. It is suggested by Inez S. Wilson, home economist.

Swedish Meat Balls.

1 pound ground beef.
1 egg
1 tablespoon potato flour or corn starch
1 small onion, chopped
½ cup milk
Ginger
Salt

To the ground beef, add the egg partially beaten, potato flour or corn starch, and onion, chopped. Moisten with milk and season with salt, and a tiny pinch of black pepper and ginger. Mix well. Dip the hands into water, and form the mixture into balls the size of a large walnut. Fry in butter or beef suet until nicely browned, add a very small amount of water, about 2 tablespoons, cover, and cook until the meat balls are done.

Silk Nighties Give Way to Pajamas

Paris (U.P.).—Nightdresses, even shimmery silken ones, no longer are worn

The news comes, not from the fashion houses, but the customs authorities at the ports and air fields. Smuggling of silks from France into other countries is prevalent among women travelers. They buy silk goods here and try to hide them at the customs barriers, or pass them off as old goods.

"Silk nightdresses used to be the most popular line for women smugglers," a customs official stated, "but nighties rarely are found by customs searchers now in women travelers' trunks. After replacing the woolen nightgown of grandma's day, the silken nightie has been ousted by silk pajamas."

The Family Marketer

Rows of Bright Vegetables Give the Marketer an Idea.

"Yes, mum, I know the history of all the things on my stand. Take oranges, now. The original California ones came from Valentia, Spain, and Valentia, Italy. The Florida oranges were found growing wild in Florida at first, but they're really wonderful oranges now. Why, when I was a boy there wasn't much of anything in the market stalls; now we've got everything anybody could want."

The Marketer, being somewhat younger than the market man, can't remember the time when the markets didn't offer all things the palate could desire, but she was impressed nevertheless.

There is a real beauty in the rows of fresh, crisp vegetables and piles of bright-colored fruits. The Marketer is about to grow rhapsodic about them. So rhapsodic, in fact, that she is going to take her pencil and paper and plan a vegetable dinner, which, if attractively served, will delight the entire family, from the head of the house on down.

Listen to some of the combinations. Sliced tomatoes, fresh, tender lima beans, snowy head of cauliflower and green spinach. Shut your eyes and picture them artistically arranged on a blue plate. Add to this a bowl of yellow chrysanthemums in the center of your table.

Listen to this one. Baked potatoes, string beans (a pinch of soda in the water will keep the lovely color), deep, rich red beets and stuffed celery.

Now for the prices. Tomatoes are 10 cents a pound; lima beans, two pounds for 15 cents; cauliflower, 15 to 25 cents a head; spinach, 5 cents a pound. The chrysanthemums are 15 cents a bunch from a farmer who comes to one of the markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays:

Potatoes are ten pounds for 25 cents, string beans two pounds for 15 cents, beets, 5 cents a bunch, and celery, 10 cents a stalk, mushrooms for recipe are 25 cents a pound.

Try glorifying the spinach some time. Here's how.

Spinach Ring.

2½ cups cooked spinach, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon scraped onion
Dash of pepper
Dash of Majoram

Cook spinach (½ peck) only until tender. Drain and chop. Add seasonings, eggs and butter and mix very thoroughly. Turn into well-greased ring mold. Place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 minutes or until firm. Turn from mold and serve with mushroom sauce.

Dinner (Vegetable) for 4 at 75 Cents.

Famed International House Hit by Slump

Eugene, Oreg. (U.P.).—University of Oregon's international house, which attracted Nation-wide attention for several years, is closed.

Decrease in numbers of foreign students attending the university, coupled with financial difficulties, is responsible. For the past few years students from many lands, representing several races, had lived there each year. American students always were kept in minority.

It is expected the house may be reopened next year.

Browned Hash.

3 tablespoons gravy
1½ cups chopped cooked meat
1 cup diced cooked potatoes
2 tablespoons chopped onions
2 tablespoons chopped green peppers
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
½ cup milk

Heat gravy in frying pan. Add and brown meat and potatoes. Cook slowly five minutes. Add rest of ingredients. Cover with lid and cook 10 minutes. Stir several times.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The articles about paintings in A Century of Progress collection have suggested some written inquiries. One relates to the distinction between pituitary and other obesity.

A picture that shows obesity, not of the pituitary type, is Venus and the Lute Player by Titian. In this picture rather too much of the fat is found around the hips and thighs, but the disproportion is not great enough to make this a specimen of pituitary obesity. The picture is rather that of a person who was physically inactive, lazy, and self-indulgent.

This Venus was not much given to exercise. Contrast it with some other pictures of fat women—those in which the legs are not fat, but in which there are great folds of fat around the hips, back, and abdomen. Pituitary obesity gets pretty close to the deformity class. Titian's Venus is far from it.

Another inquiry relates to the old faces of the Christ Child, as depicted in a dozen paintings. Most if not all of these faces are Hebrew babies. This is as it should be, since Jesus was a Jew. The adult Christ is generally depicted without distinctive Jewish features—at least in pictures painted in the later centuries. This, however, is one stage in an evolution of style or method. Well informed art critics fix the dates of certain pictures of Christ by the way in which he is represented. The accepted method of depicting him changes from period to period.

The inquiry, however, is for an explanation of the maturity of the facial expression of the Christ Child. The face of a baby at birth is without expression. It is not much more than an anatomical division of the body. As the months and years go by the experiences of life, the thoughts and emotions are written in the facial expression.

In many of these paintings the Christ Child is pictured as a babe in arms, but with the facial expression of an adult—not infrequently of an adult who has had considerable business experience. What is the explanation of the anachronism?

Cretins look like little old men. They have the facial expression of men who have had many experiences. Cretinism is a variety of thyroid abnormality. There is ample evidence of thyroid abnormality in ancient times, and many of the thyroid abnormals were known to artists. But these precocious-looking babies were not cretins. Nor did they have progeria. This is a form of infantilism complicated with an appearance of premature senility. The dictionary indicates that a persisting thymus gland may be responsible for it. A better opinion is that it is caused by a marked deficiency of the pituitary and thyroid—one or both.

Congenital syphilis may be the cause of a premature appearance of maturity, especially in the facial expression. Some children with congenital syphilis look like little old men. The facial expressions of the babies under comment are not those caused by congenital syphilis.

I suppose there is no explanation except fashion. In that period, painting the facial expression of the Christ Child as that of a mature man was the fashion.

Saving Cigarette Tins Newest Hobby

Lacquer Them in Bright Colors, Paste Etching.

Do you remember the winter of '14 when you wouldn't let the boy friend come over unless he brought you a pocket full of funny little Oriental rugs, the loot one saved from every package of some Egyptian cigarettes? You promptly sewed up a batch of laprobes, dog blankets or pillows with them, probably, and cherished the clowning until your mother put her foot down and said "either I go or the rugs go."

The gag for this present dull winter season is saving cigarette tins. The girls lacquer them in bright colors, then paste an etching or snapshot across the top. A transparent shellac over everything finishes the works. Even a child can play this game, and some of them are collecting 50 cents and doing it professionally for customers. A phenomenal way of making spending money! Much more fun than the old kid tricks of selling court-plaster or feeding the horse.

Society Girl of Rare Exotic Beauty Tells Her Own Ideas on Living Up to Her Type

A "Permanent" For Pretty Lips Is Useful, Too

Here's One That Stays on and Gives That Natural Red Tone.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

It's magic! Not the abra cadabra kind that means wands, genii and clouds of smoke, but the magic of a French formula. The chemist of a cosmetics company knew that women wanted a lipstick which would accentuate the natural coloring of their lips, not one that would give them a greasy, painted look.

"How," he mused, "could any reasonable woman want orange lips? Or purple lips? It's simple a groping after the right color which leads them to play such tricks on nature."

He mixed and blended hundreds of ingredients, year after year. At last he found a lasting, permanent rouge which creates a thin film over the lips and brings out the natural red. Its transparence causes the color to vary subtly with each individual and to harmonize with her complexion.

Two shades, light and medium, take care of the blonde and brunette. In case you're neither one nor the other you can experiment and see which has the right degree of becomingness.

The permanence of the lipstick is one of its greatest claims to favor. An application in the morning, one at noon and another in the evening insures radiant lips the whole day through.

Slipperettes, the newest thing in knitted slippers, are boons to travelers and convalescents.

Off you go for a hurried trip. The bags are all packed to overflowing and there are still the slippers to be squeezed in. With slipperettes this is no trouble. They're small, soft and light enough to fit in any corner. Or, if the bag is already closed and locked, slip them into your pocket and you'll never know they're there. When the chill drafts of your sleeping compartment begin to send shivers up and down the soles of your feet you can bring them out and find them foot warmers par excellence.

The convalescent can keep them tucked under her pillow ready to slip on at a minute's notice. They're so easily cleansed that she'll find it no effort at all to keep them spick-and-span. They come in blue, green, yellow, purple, brown, to match her bedroom, her dressing robe or, if she's color minded, her disposition for the day.

The heavy gloom of pitch dark scatters before the gentle onslaught of new artificial moonlight. It comes in the form of a small light which may be easily affixed to the bed table, the wall, or even the bed. The soft, half glow which it spreads about the room makes all the furniture visible yet leaves dimness enough to facilitate sleep. People of nervous temperaments who claim they sleep restlessly in complete darkness and can't sleep at all with a lamp burning, will find this new moonlight a blessing.

It's the best possible insurance against stumbling in the dark as you grope around over chairs and tables for the switch, and it's the next best thing to a night watchman for keeping prowlers away.

Once upon a time there was the plain and simple opera glass. But now there are so many varieties that a dealer wears a lost look when you ask for one without designating the type. A shop on F street has a representative display which includes a first cousin to lorgnettes, which has a long, sedate handle, a spectacle glass which has temples that fit over the ears, and a folding type that closes up into a flat, purse-like container.

Some of the more ornate glasses conjure up visions of real Oriental splendor with their smoky mother-of-pearl and gold trimmings, cloisonne with pearl inlay and ornamental metal. The simple glasses suggest the sports world far more readily than they do the pageantry of the operatic stage. It's easy to imagine some raccoon-cloaked fan pulling a black morocco leather pair from its zippered case and focusing them on the brawny hero as he carries the ball past the goal line.

The next best thing to the sparkle of lovely eyes is rhinestone jewelry. Its gleam and glitter add radiance to a formal frock. An F street shop is showing some starry bracelets which will provide scintillation to dazzle the most impervious stag line. Ranged alongside the bright rhinestone bracelets is one of diamonds moderately priced at $3,500. The rhinestones are not so precious, perhaps, but they serve the purpose at $1.

The ribbed jersey crew-neck sweaters which are being featured in a downtown department store leave little to be desired in jaunty sport accessories.

They're strikingly severe, and severely plain, but with the right figure and the right skirt, they'd spell style with capital letters. You may choose from eggshell, rust, and bright, green, topnotch shades in the fall color chart.

Stolen Silver.

By Katherine Smith.

I should have been more blind, and found the strength
To let the words you slowly whispered slip
Unnoticed as they fell from smiling lip
Of you, to me. I should have known that length
Of phrases does not indicate the deep
Wide path of love, and that your swelling sighs
Were lost in momentary anguish. Wise
You were to let your subtle singing creep
Into my heart, a velvet-footed thief,
When I had left my mind unlocked; I lost
The silver of my faith the night you crossed
The threshold of my dreams. My last belief
Is that you'll rob another heart, and then
The stolen silver will be mine again.

Hypnotism Used To Induce Fat Girls to Diet

Suggestion Made During Trance That Subject Eschew Starches.

Oxford, Ohio, (AP). — And now science is using hypnotism—in the laboratory at least—to aid in regulating the diet so that a girl may have a figure slim enough to be fashionable.

Professors E. F. Patten and S. A. Switzer, Miami University psychologists, experimenting on reaching the unguarded recesses of the human mind during hypnosis, are helping their laboratory subjects not only to remove excess weight, but also to overcome self-consciousness and to cut down on their smoking.

Their six years of laboratory work, based partly on that of Dr. Hull at Yale, has dealt chiefly with "post-hypnotic suggestion," in which a subject carries out actions upon waking which were suggested during the hypnotic state.

For example, a girl subject wanted to lose some weight; during a hypnotic trance it was suggested that she stop eating starchy foods. Later, fattening foods became extremely distasteful to her and she regained her slim figure.

An amateur actor who was suffering from stage fright, after receiving suggestions under hypnosis finds his acting is better. A boy who had trouble getting up early now rises at 6 a. m., and several persons who wanted to smoke less have been helped.

New Muffs Are Big As Apple Barrels

And Stylish, With Short Capes and Jackets of Ermine.

Most of the horse show ponies hung up their saddles and quit work over the influx of muffs the opening night. These new muffs just about accommodate a peck of apples and are definitely flat like the old "rug" muffs, replacing the silly little barrel types. They're usually carried with these absurd and charming little short capes or jackets of ermine, but some of the loveliest are in silver fox.

The newer ermine wraps are about knee length, and often have a detachable ascot scarf of either matching or contrasting fur, as a sable scarf against the white ermine. The fur capes and jackets are grand because they may be worn over long velvet evening wraps if one's gown needs more protection than a short doo-dad affords.

Seattle Cupid Busy.

Underwood & Underwood.

The patrician beauty of Miss Dorothea Lane (right), daughter of Mr. Richard Lane; the soft dark loveliness of diminutive Alicia Rogers (left), daughter of Mrs. Philip Owen Coffin, and the exquisite blonde elegance of Miss Nella Veverka (center), debutante daughter of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, each, in its own way, perfectly exemplifies the orchid-like quality of the exotic type of beauty, say national authorities. This is the beauty type which requires a luxurious background, to whom life is generous and unexacting.

Schiaparelli's Stormy Weather Hits Our Shore

And Women Love the New Windblown Fullness of the Skirts.

"Windblown" aptly describes the new front fullness introduced by Schiaparelli in her latest daytime collection. The designer christened it "Stormy Weather," but Americans have already given it their own name, "windblown." The latter seems delightfully suited to sports clothes of breezy character that are sure to find favor on this side of the Atlantic.

This new cut keeps the silhouette slim as viewed from front or back. This makes it a happy choice for the slender maiden, although some matronly types are able to wear it advantageously.

It was only natural that Schiapareilli, always among the most advanced designers, should turn to a "forward silhouette" while the others were still clinging for dear life to the backward movement in figure outlines. Where Schiaparelli leads, other designers will follow.

Bruyere also has a new silhouette, but it is far less adaptable than the Schiaparelli one. The Bruyere innovation consist of a hip cape, belted at front and split at the center back.

Other designers are retaining slim outlines, hoping to straighten them completely by spring. The tubular sheath grows more sheath-like with every turn of Fashion's wheel.

T. R. Named White House.

The White House has not always been called by that name.

At various times it has been "The President's Palace," "The President's House," "The Executive Mansion" and "The White House." It was President Theodore Roosevelt who changed the official stationery of the President to read "The White House." And that has been its title since the days of the original Roosevelt President.

Planes and People Are Fun For Pretty Airways Hostess

Hariette Heffron Is at Home With Air-Pockets and Movie Stars.

Air pockets and important personalities are all in a day's work to a 24-year-old girl who is afraid of neither.

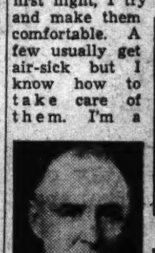
From Gary Cooper, the movie star, to H. G. Kump, Governor of West Virginia, noted men are just ordinary human beings when they're up in the air, according to Miss Hariette J. Heffron, of East Dubuque, Ill., hostess for the American Airways' passenger airplanes on the Washington, D. C.-Cincinnati, Ohio, run.

"Air pockets don't frighten me anymore. I've grown used to them," said svelte, dark-eyed Miss Heffron yesterday in her room at the Mayflower Hotel. "I've been flying this run for five weeks, ever since it was started, and I feel like an old-timer now.

Birds and Orchids.

"The minute the airplane leaves the airport I look over my passengers and if there are some on their first flight, I try to reassure them and make them comfortable. A few usually get air-sick but I know how to take care of them. I'm a trained nurse. All the hostesses employed by my company are graduate nurses.

MISS HARIETTE J. HEFFRON plays hostess to airplane passengers as they fly from Washington, D. C., to Cincinnati, Ohio, or vice versa. Movie stars and governors have been entertained "7,000 feet up" by attractive Miss Heffron, formerly a trained nurse in Oak Park, Ill.



Gov. Kump.

Gary Cooper.

Miss Jordan.

"I don't mind taking care of sick passengers if they're human, but once I had a whole flock of birds to look after. That wasn't so pleasant. We don't usually carry animals. On this particular trip, Dorothy Jordan, the movie actress, was on her way East. At every stop there was a caged bird and orchids waiting for her from a Hollywood beau.

"Miss Jordan took care of the orchids, but I had to look after the birds. I stacked them in one corner of the crowded plane and wrapped them in blankets to keep them from freezing in an altitude of 7,000 feet.

Those Air Pockets.

"Gary Cooper was an awfully nice passenger. He's amusing and is quite witty. The Countess Di Frasso was bored to death with the scenery, the airplane and the passengers. Gov. Kump, of West Virginia, and Mayor Devan, of Charleston, W. Va., were just the opposite. They were so exuberant that I couldn't get them to sit down and fasten their seat belts.

They romped all over the ship, tossing apples back and forth. Then we fell into a deep air-pocket. The Governor and the mayor bounced like a couple of rubber balls. When they came down they meekly fastened their seat-belts and 'stayed put' for the rest of the trip."

When Miss Heffron completed her nurse's training course at the Oak Park, Ill., Hospital she began to study medicine.

"But I ran out of money soon after I started and a friend of my father's suggested that I become an air hostess. I liked the idea—so, here I am.

"The work is lots more exciting than being a nurse in a hospital. I point out the scenic spots, rivers and cities to my passengers. I serve them their lunch and try to entertain them. It's fun, being a hostess 7,000 feet up."

Simple English To Become New World Tongue

Scientists Cut Language to 850 Basic Words for All Uses.

London (AP).—A solution of international language problems is suggested by the Orthological Institute of Cambridge. It consists of a simplification of the English tongue called "basic English."

Failure of many attempts to provide an "invented" language that could be used as a means of communication between the peoples of all nations led to the effort to adapt the English tongue for the purpose.

The new form of English contains only 850 words, 600 of them nouns, 150 adjectives, 16 verbs or names of operators and the rest adverbs, propositions or names of directions.

These, in addition to numbers, weights and measures, the calendar and such words as club, radio and telegram, already internationalized, do the work of 500,000 words of English at a level of ordinary communication.

English was chosen for the new medium because it is the natural or administrative language of 500,000,000 people, and because no other language is susceptible to the same kind of simplification.

Schools on the American Pacific Coast are interested in this form of the language as a way of helping the young Chinese and Japanese to a good knowledge of English. In China where English is the second language, there is much interest in it, and Japanese teachers are about to put it in their schools.

Widely differentiated uses of a word are eliminated in the new medium, such as "for" in the sense of "because," "that" in the sense of a relative pronoun, or "bit" as part of a horse's harness.

It makes use of the fact almost all verbs can be analyzed into one of a few fundamental operations in combination with a directive. The simplest combinations of these give equivalents for 2,000 common verbs such as "put in' for "insert," "go up" for "climb," "take out" for "extricate," and "go against a law" for "break a law."

Coolidges Lead List In Social Register

Boston (U.P.).—The Coolidges had a race with the Browns, Smiths and the Joneses in the 1934 social register.

The Coolidges had 43 names, which included Calvin Coolidge, John and Florence, while the Browns had 39 with the other two names not far behind.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

If November 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:55 to 8:10 a. m., from 11:50 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 4:50 to 5:50 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10:30 a. m. and from 6:30 to 8:10 p. m.

The average person in business should run into no complications or set-backs. You will have to struggle to keep up a cheerful outlook and you will find it worthwhile. Those suffering from nervous disorders may have a bad day and unless careful will get into such a frame of mind as will greatly retard their recuperation.

The child born on this November 15 will more than likely not be a game loser. Discomforts and hardships will serve to "cramp his style" rather than to bring out the fine points of his character; will not do well in stern competition. Inclined to depend too much on his parents and if petted and pampered will not be prepared for life.

If November 15 is the date of your birth, you are probably a person whose many conflicting emotions keep you constantly upset; you seem never quite sure of what you want to do or of what you should do. As a result, you are inclined to run around and consult everybody that comes your way on how you should handle your personal problems. If you will learn to keep your business to yourself and follow the dictates of your own conscience, you will get along much better. Your first impulses are usually correct for you are a person of high ideals and you invariably approach your problems from the right angle. It is only after much pondering that you fail to be able to reach a decision and begin running around in circles.

Born on November 15, your tongue is your worst enemy. You are most indiscreet in the remarks that you make and in the criticisms of those about you that you voice openly. The fact that your judgments of others are good in most cases does not prevent you from incurring the enmity of others. You can not try to hide your own faults; as a matter of fact, you are too quick to admit them. There, however, you stop, instead of carrying on a little house-cleaning of your own. You seem to have a gift when it comes to handling those who are sick; you apparently instinctively know how to care for them and further than that, you have a rejuvenating and invigorating influence on them. They respond to your ministrations and take heart and have renewed hope.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

MRS. CHARLES W. SEMMES.

Christ Child Society Wins the Loyal Devotion of Mrs. Semmes.

Every Washington woman should have an interest in some form of welfare work. This is the opinion expressed by Mrs. Charles W. Semmes, who devotes her time to the welfare of children, acting as assistant treasurer of the Christ Child Society, and being a board member of St. Joseph's Home and School.

"There is a happiness in assisting others that nothing else will bring," Mrs. Semmes says. "I am sure that no one could look into the happy faces of the youngsters who come to the Christ Child Settlement House, or of the boys at St. Joseph's Home and School without realizing that work for such as these gives one a better outlook on life.

"I am particularly interested in the Christ Child Society because it has no racial or creed prejudices. There every one is welcomed. Its different activities, such as boys' and girls' clubs, dental clinics, convalescent home for children, settlement house and layette distributions for expectant mothers are each in themselves a complete welfare agency, and when combined go to make, in my opinion, the most practical social agency in Washington. Because it covers such a great field and does so much good, I give most of my spare time to it."

Tea at Kenmore.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 14 (Spl.).—Members of the freshman class of Fredericksburg State Teachers College will tomorrow be guests of honor at the weekly tea given at historic Kenmore, Fredericksburg home of Betty Washington and Mrs. Fielding H. Lewis.

Ginger bread will be served made by the same recipe with which Mary, mother of Washington, made it to serve to Lafayette.

Dorothea Lane, of Dark-Haired Spanish-English Charm, Loves Hostess Gowns and Striking Evening Costumes.

The road to beauty leads first to an intelligent understanding of her particular beauty type on the part of any woman, and then to its interpretation through proper coiffure, gowning, cosmetics, jewelry and perfumes, say national beauty experts.

In today's interview, the ninth article in a series on the twelve types of feminine beauty, a Washington society girl of the exotic type tells how she achieves distinction.

By Elizabeth Young.

The fragile modeling of dark-haired Dorothea Lane's exquisite Grecian countenance does, indeed, suggest the rare and delicate beauty of an orchid.

National authorities on beauty, in identifying the 12 master types of beauty in women, named this slender, continentally-educated daughter of Mr. Richard Lane as the exotic type among Washington's lovely society girls, the orchid-like woman whose beauty is at its best in luxurious surroundings.

"I like exotic unusual jewlery and wear a great deal of it," said Miss Lane, in a clear, clipped, low-pitched voice, when interviewed on the subject of how she achieves such complete distinction in clothing, coiffure and cosmetics.

"I have at least a dozen and a half lovely old silver bracelets, old Egyptian, old Byzantine, things I picked up in Egypt, China, South America, Mexico. And these are my lucky pieces—my elephant's hair bracelets." From her arm, she slipped two mere threads of circlets, in black and gold.

"I found them in Ceylon. They are supposed to be very lucky. Since today is my first day out after a week's illness, and Monday, the 13th, besides, I put myself under their protection." Miss Lane's quiet laughter belied the suggestion of superstition implied in her words.

Inherits Spanish-English Beauty.

Miss Lane has a heritage of Spanish and English blood in her veins, the English predominating. From the English side, perhaps, she inherits her delicate fair skin, which freckles slightly in summer; her proud carriage; her indefinable air of good breeding; her lovely voice. Her deep, dark eyes, her straight dark brows, her rich black hair, which shows odd, mahogany glints in the deep natural waves as she turns her head, could well be attributed to her Spanish ancestry.

"I have a small string of real pearls that I wear all the time," she continued. "I never take them off. And some diamond rings that I almost always have on. I always wear earrings—small button ones for day and long ones for evening. I can't remember a day, since I've been old enough, that I haven't worn earrings."

She has two especial favorites in earrings for evening wear; one a pair of heavy gold ones, heavy and unusual in design; the other an intricate French creation in marquisette.

New York modistes furnish Miss Lane with all her clothes, which she divides into three classes. There are several plain dresses in greens and blacks, in heavy crepes and satins, with black fur top coats of seal and caracul for day. "Although I adore mink, I do not possess a mink wrap," she lamented.

Finds Hostess Gowns Exhilarating.

For the cocktail or tea hour, a daily ritual in her home from 5:30 until 7 in the evening—when she finds relaxation and opportunity to cultivate her friends after busy days spent in the Connecticut avenue shop, which is her hobby—she likes to slip into subtle intimate creations of supple velvet, made into hostess gowns or smart lounging pajamas, of Russian inspiration.

"Even if people are not coming in, I think every woman should discover for herself the tonic and relaxation to be found in slipping into flattering gowns of this type in the late afternoon," Miss Lane commented.

Her evening dresses are always as strikingly individual as the mode and the modiste will allow. Here again she indulges her preference for odd Russian effects in color: Red-and-purple combinations, deep, dull greens, black with white, always made very long, for winter. In summer, she likes greens and yellows—"the cool looking colors"—made on bouffant, floating lines, in such sheer materials as organdie, organza and chiffons.

Whereas she likes her evening gowns very long, Miss Lane prefers daytime clothes to be short enough to permit perfect freedom in walking, regardless of the mode. "I am always having terrific arguments with my dressmakers on this score," she said.

Keeps Hair Care Secret.

Commenting on the care required to keep her glossy dark hair in condition, Miss Lane said:

"I have a pet woman whose name I wouldn't give away for anything who does my hair. She shampoos it every 10 days, very thoroughly, and gives my scalp a vigorous massage. She is Swedish."

Miss Lane wears her naturally curly hair cut short, slightly shingled in the back to emphasize her beautifully rounded, gracefully set head. It is brushed back, unparted, from her forehead and face, in a soft halo effect. She has a short, full upper lip and finely cut straight under lip, which gives to her expression a frail, voluptuous quality, contrasting oddly with her Grecian purity of feature.

For evening she paints her mouth with Louis Philippe's lipstick, "Angelus No. 8," a brilliant light red, and uses an imported loose powder rouge of a cerise shade, which looks darker after applied to the skin. She dusts her face lightly with a powder she mixes herself, using Elizabeth Arden's natural and rachel powders.

The natural beauty of her skin, which has been likened to the texture of a magnolia blossom, makes it unnecessary for her to use much powder on her face, and she takes care only to powder her nose—"to keep the shine off," she smilingly explained.

Makes Up Eyes for Evening.

She admitted that she makes up her eyes a trifle for evening, using Egyptian kohl, a brilliant soft black powder—"like gold dust, only black." She applies the kohl with fingertips to the outer edges of her eyelids, to give depth and length to her orbs.

For daytime she uses a slightly darker lipstick, one of Harriet Hubbard Ayers' make, and the same powder mixture as for evening. Perfume she wears only for evening, and her present favorite is Caron's "Acaciosa," a light flower fragrance, which she touches lightly behind her ears, at the top of her forehead and occasionally on the back of her hands.

Before applying her light make-up of powder and lipstick in the morning she again sponges her face with witch hazel. And she repeats this performance in the early evening, when freshening her make-up for the cocktail hour.

Always before taking a hot bath she applies the Luxuria cream liberally to her face and on wiping it away when her bath is concluded finds her skin glowingly moist and clear.

"I find I can no longer keep the irregular hours of my debutante days and not feel it," she ruefully declared. "I simply have to have eight hours' sleep. On less than that I find myself going on nervous rather than physical energy."

Manages Daily Rest Period.

She manages from 30 minutes to an hour's rest period of sleep or simply relaxation each evening she is going out.

Walking is Miss Lane's principal exercise, and on fine days she walks the 2 miles from her home to her place of business. She looks much taller than her avowed 5 feet 4 inches and slighter than her 120-odd pounds. She eats a very light breakfast of fruit juice and hot ovaltine or chocolate—never coffee until late afternoon. Her luncheon is usually a light two-course meal of clear soup and sea food, and for dinner "I eat everything from soup to nuts," said Miss Lane.

The avoidance of potatoes seems to be a fetish among Washington beauties, for Miss Lane confessed she eats them only occasionally and then baked. As for desserts: "I never refuse them when dining out, and I never order them if the choice is left to me," she said. "If I find my weight rising—and it does run up and down in an amazing fashion—I watch my diet rather carefully and try not to eat too many sweets and starches between meals, at the tea hour, for instance."

Miss Lane was educated in Paris, Switzerland and Italy and made her debut here and in Philadelphia in 1925. She spent much of her time in travel before essaying a business career. Although she is an accomplished horsewoman, she has given up riding in recent years as the result of near-fatal injuries sustained in a fall from a horse.

Another exclusive interview with a beautiful Washington woman, belonging to a master beauty type, will be carried in these columns tomorrow.

Two Cardinals Honor Ryan At Reception

Smith and Farley Speak; 2,500 Laymen, 42 Prelates Attend.

For the first time in Catholic Church history in North America two Cardinals appeared on the same speakin program last night at a reception given at the Mayflower Hotel, honoring the Most Rev James H. Ryan, rector of the Catholic University of America, and recently raised to the dignity of the episcopate with the title of Bishop of the Titular See of Modra.

Twenty-five hundred laymen, 42 prelates of the Catholic Church, headed by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, and numerous clergy attended.

On the speaking program were Cardinals O'Connell and Hayes, Alfred E. Smith, Postmaster General Farley, Frank J. Hogan and Bishop Ryan. The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the Catholic University, was master of ceremonies.

"The present occasion offers an opportunity of calling attention to the fact that the Catholic University is a pre-eminent school of Christ, standing for supernatural faith in God and the highest evaluation of the dignity of man," Cardinal Hayes said.

He said the scholastic atmosphere of the university is charged with the liberty of the children of God.

"Submission to authority in no way detracts from the domain of freedom," he said. "Are those amongst us less American who obey the Constitution and revere constituted authority?"

He said an extraordinary degree of healthy academic liberty flourishes in the university.

"I venture to say," he added, "that Catholic scholarship has found in the university a most fertile soil that is yielding and will yield abundant fruitage in supernatural faith and human culture.

Smith as "Campus Figure."

Cardinal O'Connell said "it is our hope to build up the Catholic University of America so that it may serve the cause of religion more effectively, so that it may help to bring the thought of God to man's daily activities, so that it may quicken nobler impluses of life and so that, in this time of grave mental concern, the Catholic Church may be a living voice in world affairs.

"We are confident that the Catholic University of America, under the leadership of Bishop James Hugh Ryan, will proceed to greater achievements both for the church and for the Nation. We rejoice in the honor the Holy Father has shown the rector of the university."

Smith, who has just been made a member of the board of trustees of the university, declared that "in recent years I have become quite a campus figure." He referred to his new place on the board and to numerous honorary degrees.

Farley Speaks.

"Our Catholic University is an integral part of the spiritual and social order it attempts to serve," he said. "I know that this university has been a great asset to our Nation."

Smith said there is a close relationship between religion and patriotism.

"I believe that a person can not be a good Catholic and a bad citizen," he said.

Postmaster General Farley spoke on "The University in National Life."

"Now that America has accepted a new deal, it stands as a world power with responsibilities beyond her own confines," he said. "I know that in this age when man counts more than property and when men are the state, our universities will not fail to face the future."

Hogan Describes University.

"This gathering of men and women from all walks of life and of every faith and creed has a two-fold purpose," Hogan said, "the felicitating of a leader lately signally honored and the contemplating of an institution of learning whose unobstrusive growth has escaped the attention of those in whose midst it has become great."

He gave a description of the university, pointing out that it was founded as a graduate university, but that since 1909 its doors have been opened to undergraduates. He pointed out that 65 per cent of its faculty and nearly 80 per cent of its student body are laymen, and that grouped about the university are 32 colleges for men and one for women.

Addressing Bishop Ryan, he said: "We join representatives from every part of the Nation, and they join us, in here expressing the wish that the years that lie before you may be as rich in achievement as have been these past five years, and may bring you even greater honors than those which are yours tonight."

British Enlarge Navy Plans To Keep Up With U. S., Japan

Decision to Build Bigger Cruisers Announced "With Regrets."

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—The British government announced today it intended to build larger warships, within the limits of the 1930 naval treaty, to meet the construction programs of the United States and Japan.

This announcement was made in the House of Commons today by Sir Bolton Meredith Eyres Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, who said Japan and the United States were building bigger cruisers.

He said the admiralty had revised its 1933 program to include two new type 9,000-ton cruisers with increased armament and one cruiser of the 5,200-ton Arethusa class and that revision had been made "following the most anxious consideration and with much regret."

Big Navy Group Pleased.

With the world disarmament negotiations apparently deadlocked, the admiralty's announcement was received enthusiastically by big navy advocates, who have been warning that Great Britain was becoming the weak sister of the seas instead of its mistress as she has been described for centuries.

The secretariat of the Navy League said the announcement was "an indication to the public that the admiralty is watching every development in the naval situation and not sitting back in their chairs."

"One hopes," said the Navy League statement, "that this decision will not be used by the scare-mongers to indicate a likelihood of war."

Almost constantly, since President Roosevelt launched a United States naval program under the terms of the naval treaty, British leaders have shown alarm.

Argument Reviewed.

In his announcement to the House of Commons, Eyers Monsell revived the long-standing British argument over large and small cruisers. He pointed out the United States and Japan, under terms of the treaty, were quite entitled to build the ships those countries had in contemplation and in actual construction.

However, he said, the British government, by agreement, would restrict vessels of the larger sizes as much as possible.

He recalled that the 1933 program included one cruiser of 7,250 tons and three of 5,400 tons, and that the admiralty had decided in favor of three larger cruisers rather than the four smaller ones previously contemplated.

Rescue Squad Benefit Set.

A Dutch supper will be served at the Fire Department headquarters at Bladensburg by the Ladies Auxiliary next Tuesday to raise funds for the Bladensburg volunteer rescue squad.

'Al' at 'Frank's' Tea Party Held of Significance to N. Y.

of the Democratic set-up in New York. The fact remains that Mr. Smith was invited to the White House, while John J. Curry, grand sachem of Tammany Hall, waited four days in vain for such an invitation.

When "Al" and "Frank" broke bread in the intimacy of the White House study, they broke the ice for a series of conferences. The first of these may well have been the visit of Postmaster General Jim Farley to Smith's suite at the Willard Hotel later last night when the pair were closeted for an extremely private talk. This suite was the mecca of a constant stream of those seeking the ear of the former New York Governor.

Most of Mr. Smith's time was taken up with a dinner of the board of trustees of Catholic University, at which he was installed as "some sort of college professor" to use his own expression, and later with an elaborate reception in the Mayflower Hotel.

The White House tea party lasted less than half an hour.

"The only mention of politics was when one of the kids asked for another piece of cake," rumbled Al, good naturedly, afterwards, referring to the small children of Mrs. Anna Curtis Dall, daughter of the President, who poured tea for them.

Raskob Present.

In addition to Mrs. Dall and the Roosevelt grandchildren, who divided their wide-eyed attention between refreshment and the deep-voiced visitor with the hearty laugh, John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Dr. Raymond T. Sullivan, Smith's personal physician, were present.

As a result, the two New Yorkers, whose political fortunes have shuttled so spectacularly in the past decade, and from whose meeting at this time so much of political significance was expected, made good their joint insistence that this was to be—on the surface—nothing more or less than a social visit.

Embarrassment Relieved.

From a close friend of Mr. Smith, it was learned last night Al had expressed some doubt as to the advisability of coming to Washington to attend the trustees' meeting, in view of possible embarrassment if he failed to call at the White House. President Roosevelt, apprised of this, promptly extended an invitation to tea.

Announcement earlier in the day of the appointment of James J. Hoey, Smith's floor manager at the National conventions of 1924 and 1928, as collector of internal revenue for the Port of New York was considered extremely significant. It seemed to be, and indeed is, a step in the reorganization of the Democratic set-up in New York City.

On arrival here in Mr. Raskob's private car yesterday afternoon, however, Mr. Smith expressed surprise at news of the appointment, adding:

"I consider Mr. Hoey an able, capable, conscientious citizen of New York."

Indorsed By Smith.

Mr. Smith's letter to Mr. Hoey, indorsing his candidacy for office in the recent city election, was one of the former's few expressions of political opinion in many months. Political observers condsider it evident that if Mr. Smith did not have a finger in the appointment, President Roosevelt has definitely extended an olive branch in making his selection.

As for politics, in general or particular, Al had "nothing to say" when he arrived yesterday. It was noted he wore a black derby, rather than his familiar brown one, indicating his visit was one of ceremony. Both before and after his call at the White House Smith rejected all attempts to lead the conversation into political channels.

"Why won't you fellows believe me?" Al pleaded. "I've always observed the inviolability of the sanctorum of the fourth estate. I am here to attend a meeting of the trustes of Catholic University, and that's all there is to it."

Grandchildren Discussed.

At the White House tea, in lieu of politics, President Roosevelt and Smith discussed the number of their respective grandchildren, it developing that Al leads, 8 to 4.

"But don't give up, you've still got a chance," he remarked to Mrs. Roosevelt, as he chatted with the First Lady, who was entertaining at a tea of her own on the first floor.

"What are you going to do about that yellow-headed one?" Al asked, referring to "Buzzie" Dall.

"Oh, his hair will turn dark just like all the rest of them," replied Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Well, it certainly feels funny to be here," said Smith, looking around. "The last time I was here, we were talking law enforcement with President Hoover."

Inquiry Told Of D. C. Milk Racketeering

Dr. Clyde L. King, AAA Arbitrator, Surprise Witness.

Denies He Attempted to "Fix" Retail Price in Washington.

Racketeering in the sale of milk and the "bootlegging" of milk into the Capital were charged yesterday by Dr. Clyde L. King, milk arbitrator for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who appeared as a surprise witness before the Senate Milk Investigating Committee.

King denied he had tried to "fix" retail milk prices in the District in 1929, as charged by Robert L. Dickson, secretary of the Alderney-Green Meadows-Fairfax Farms Dairies. He explained he attempted to fix only producers' prices.

Called as a witness by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, King testified the Chestnut Farms Dairy, an affiliate of the National Dairy Products Corporation, had given Christmas presents to apartment house janitors and hotel chefs in return for exclusive distribution of its milk in the buildings.

It became apparent to him, he said, that a "lot of illegal trade practices were going on—rackets by janitors and chefs. I also became convinced that milk was being bootlegged into the District, contrary to health regulations."

Denies Attending Meeting.

Questioned by Thomas L. Dawson, attorney for insurgent members of the producers' association, King admitted he "knows nothing about the Washington market."

Senator William H. King chairman of the committee, asked King if he was present at an alleged price-fixing meeting at the headquarters of the producers' association, from which Henry N. Brawner, jr., withdrew when a price-fixing discussion began.

"I was never at any meeting from which Mr. Brawner withdrew," he replied.

He admitted having received a letter from the Department of Justice, in which he was warned that the proposal before the producers' association was illegal. He explained he believed he was acting under a law which permits producers' cooperatives to fix producers' prices.

The illegal trade practices were first brought to his attention, he said, by Lee Thompson, of the Thompson Dairy, and Raymond Wise, of the Chevy Chase Dairy.

At a conference between Mr. Brawner, Mr. Wise and Mr. Thompson, Mr. Brawner took the position that the practices were accepted factors on the market and he had to meet the competition, King said.

Tells of N. Y. Conference.

Subsequently, he continued, the complaining distributors and Mr. Brawner went with him to the National Dairy offices in New York, where the question was discussed with Thomas H. McInnery, head of the huge dairy corporation.

"What happened?" asked W. Gwynn Gardiner, attorney for the producers' association.

"Nothing," he replied.

Afterwards, King said, he advised the producers to merge the Washington-Baltimore markets.

"Did Mr. McInnerney say at the conference in New York that he intended to crush the cooperatives?" asked Gardiner.

"I don't recall that. The substance of what he told me was that the matter had to be determined locally."

Questioned by Senator Pat McCarran, King expressed favor for cooperative producers' associations. Otherwise, he said, "farmers must accept the lowest price of the crookedest competitor in the market."

In responce to a question by Elwood H. Seal, special counsel to the committee, King said he had been informed of illegal practices in the market the past few weeks. His information came from Mr. Thompson, he said.

Prices to the producers were determined by officials of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association when they did not know the cost of production, it was testified by H. T. Pancoast, of Purcellville, Va., a member of the board of directors.

Hearings were recessed until Saturday morning.

Musician Arrested On Extortion Charge

A charge of extortion was lodged against Fred Williamson, 29, musician, 2 Eighteenth street southeast, yesterday in connection with his alleged attempt to take money from the father of the youth who accidentally shot his sweetheart to death in the Franklin Park Hotel June 8. Fire Damages Masonic Hall At Anacostia Tables Set for Eastern Star Banquet When Blaze Starts.

A three-alarm fire, raging beyond control for nearly half an hour, last night damaged the interior of Anacostia's four-story Masonic Hall, Fourteenth and U streets southeast.

The blaze was discovered by Policeman T. A. Lusby, of the Eleventh Precinct, when he looked from a window of his home adjacent to the lodge building. Dense smoke and flames quickly attracted a crowd.

Lusby telephoned No. 15 Engine Company, less than a block away. Passersby turned in a second alarm and Battalion Chief T. B. Stanton sounded a third alarm upon his arrival.

The blaze was confined to a hot-air flue running from the basement to the roof. Flames burst through the walls on each floor, presenting a problem to firemen. Open windows throughout the building tended to fan the blaze, and before third-alarm companies arrived the fire had gained considerable headway.

On the main floor, tables were set for the weekly banquet of Electra Chapter, No. 1, Order of the Eastern Star. Damage to the room forced postponement of the dinner.

The building was unoccupied when the fire was discovered. Wooden stairways and inside construction increased the fire hazard. The structure's exterior is brick.

The structure was built in 1890.

Churches Plan Aid In Chest Campaign

Pastors Promise Appeals From Pulpits Sunday.

Sunday will be "Community Chest Sunday" in the churches of Washington.

Pastors of all Protestant churches in the city have agreed to either preach a special sermon on the chest, make some mention of the campaign in their sermon, or permit a speaker from the chest speakers bureau to occupy a portion of the time at their morning service.

As usual, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of the Baltimore diocese, will write a letter to be read in every Catholic pulpit in Washington, urging the congregations of all these churches to take part in the chest campaign.

In addition to these church plans, the rabbis of all the Hebrew congregations in Washington will refer to the Community Chest campaign at the synagogues Friday night.

Local Option League Meets.

The Gaithersburg Local Option League will meet tonight in Masonic Hall, Gaithersburg, to discuss local option for the county. A musical program will be presented by Mrs. Helen Bickmore and the Gaithersburg High School Quartet. The Rev. Herman Wilson is chairman of the general committee.

They Bring Their Favorite Playthings to Be Fixed for Needy Tots.

New Contributions Swell Total for Children's Christmas Joy.

Walter William Wilcox, 3, and Frances Lee Wilcox, 6, his big sister, of 2526 Seventeenth street northwest, their arms laden with precious toys and their cheeks glowing with excitement, qualified yesterday as the first Santa Claus Children Aids of The Washington Post 1933 Toy and Doll Fund.

They came into The Post city room to see the Santa Claus Lady. "Where's Santa Claus?" demanded Walter William, 'there's snow outside and he ought to be here."

At last he was satisfied that Santa Claus isn't due here for several weeks. Then the children presented their gifts.

Some of the toys bore the marks of honorable service. Susie, a nice doll, was minus a leg, but that can be fixed, and "Cotton," a little toy dog, had lost his eyes. But, as Frances pointed out, Susie is really a very sweet doll, even if she is a little lame, and "Cotton" needs only minor repairs.

Watch, Santa!

As the children went out of the door, after being photographed, Walter William glanced back, rather wistfully, at his toy friends of yesterday. Santa Claus must have checked the little boy's sacrifice on his big book to remind him to leave new toys for the lad on Christmas eve.

The Post Toy and Doll Fund grew to $9.75 yesterday, including a gift of $5 in a single donation. The Santa Claus Lady confided to The Junior Post editor that she just knew the Fund would pass the $100 mark by Saturday night of this week, 'Of course it will." The Junior Post editor agreed. "I hope every one realizes any gift is acceptable, from a dime up."

Ding-How of Hydegree reported he had passed a busy day lining up his workers for the Toy Fund. A ring came on his doorbell just as he was going to bed and there stood Socrates and Xantippe, two of his turtle friends. Each had a quarter in his mouth. They had come to match Ding-How's first gift to the Fund.

Ching Wing Will Help.

Ching Wing, of the Willows, a chow dog who did valiant work for the Fund last year, reported he is ill at present, but that his master would be glad to lend his automobile to assist in collecting toys.

Encouraged by the promise of the National Dyers and Cleaners Association, the officials of The Post Toy and Doll Fund repeat the request for toys and dolls that need renovating.

All donations to The Post Toy and Doll Fund should be sent to the Fund, care of The Washington Post. Each contribution will be acknowledged in the columns of The Post.

Dog Alibi

Illness no Excuse for Lack of License.

Even if your dog is sick he must have a license, Judge Ralph Given ruled in Police Court yesterday.

George Staley, 45, of 1229 Minnesota avenue southeast, charged with failure to obtain a license for one of his dogs, told the court he had purchased two licenses for dogs and they had both died.

Answering the judge's query as to why he failed to buy a license for a third, Staley replied that the dog was sick and he was afraid he also would die.

Judge Given took Staley's personal bond on his promise to get the sick dog a license.

Lighted Monument Lures Birds to Death, Says Biologist

Almost a thousand birds have been dashed to death against the Washington Monument since the practice of illuminating the famous memorial at night was begun two years ago.

Miss Phoebe Knappen, Department of Agriculture biologist, made this declaration yesterday in a paper read before the American Ornithologists Union, in annual session yesterday in New York at the American Museum of Natural History.

Miss Knappen said more than 500 birds were killed by flying against or being blown against the Monument in 1932 and that to date this year more than 300 had suffered a like fate. Lighting of the shaft began November 11, 1931.

In more than 30 years, said Miss Knappen, bird mortalities at the Monument have not approximated the total of the past two years.

Three Washington ornithologists were elected officers of the union yesterday. They are Dr. Herbert Friedmann, of the Smithsonian Institution, second vice president; Dr. T. S. Palmer, of Department of Agriculture, secretary, and Dr. W. C. McAtee, of the Department of Agriculture, treasurer.

168 Youths Fill District's C. C. C. Quota

Recruits From Camp Dix Join 24 Sent Here From Idaho.

Real Work on Various Projects in Capital Begins Today.

While chill winds whistled through the hastily-erected tents which will be their home until barracks are completed, 168 Civilian Conservation Corps youths last night got their first taste of Washington in the wilds of deepest Anacostia.

The detachment, most of them recruits, arrived yesterday afternoon from Camp Dix, New Jersey, to give Fort Dupont, the Capital's own C. C. C. camp, a full complement. They joined the 24 men who arrived recently from Red Lake, Idaho.

Work Starts Today.

Work will start in earnest today. Yesterday the newcomers were concerned only with a couple of substantial meals and putting up their army tents. Barracks are being constructed by civilian laborers and are expected to be completed soon.

Among the projects on the calendar are the arboretum, for which they will clear the land; taking out old Hickory Road, which runs from Bladensburg road to the Anacostia flats, and clearing land for Fort Dupont Park, to connect Alabama avenue with Anacostia Park.

Eighty men will be assigned to the arboretum job, cleaning out timber and underbrush. This work will be under supervision of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture.

Signed up for a six-month period, the campers also will build roads and trails, remove fire hazards, perform erosion-control work and landscaping and otherwise improve all newly acquired park areas in Anacostia.

Ten Civilian Foremen.

J. H. Peterson is superintendent of Fort Dupont. Under him are 10 civilian foremen, who will have charge of the C. C. C. workers. Discipline will be maintained and recreational activities directed by Army officers. C. Marshall Finnan, director of National Capital Parks, is general superintendent.

Fort Dupont is the second parks camp to get under way in the Greater Washington area. Fort Hunt, on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway, received its full quota last Saturday and has started operations.

The regular quota for each camp is 200, plus the 16 men who are entitled to join from the section in which the camp is located.

Anglo-British Debate Is Tie

Students Argue Here on Nationalism as a World Menace.

Debating teams representing the National Union of Students of England and George Washington University argued the question of Nationalism in a "no decision" verbal bout last night at Corcoran Hall.

The specific question was:

"Resolved, That Nationalism Is a Menace to Civilization." The invading team of Britishers took the affirmative and denounced nationalistic policies, now rampant in the world.

Defense of this Nation's NRA with the argument that a true and effective internationalism could be established only by sound component parts of individual nationalistic nations was made by the George Washington debaters.

Members of the English team were L. T. Kitchen, of Kings College, and F. L. Ralph, of Sheffield University. Edgar M. Gerlach and Seymour Mintz argued for George Washington. Dean Henry Grattan Doyle presided.

City to Escape Storm, Says U. S. Forecast

Weather Bureau Issues Gale Warning to East Coast.

Washington is expected to escape the storm which has been blowing from the northwest, wrecking Great Lakes shipping and bringing heavy snows, the Weather Bureau said last night.

At the same time it issued storm warnings along the Atlantic Coast from Cape Hatteras to Portland, Me., indicating the wind would reach gale force by this morning.

The prediction for today is for fair and colder weather with the lowest temperature about 26 degrees.

Half a dozen boats were in distress on the Great Lakes, an Associated Press dispatch said, as winds reaching 40-mile-an-hour velocity swooped down from Canada.

Six inches of snow was reported in several Midwest and Eastern States, while California perspired with a temperature of 96 degrees. Several inches of snow covered Pennsylvania, western New York, the West Virginia Panhandle, and Northern Ohio.

The storm lashed shipping on both Lake Michigan and Lake Erie. A tug sank off Kingston, Ontario, but its crew was saved. The steamer D. E. Callendar of Cleveland was aground in a snowstorm off Long Point, Ontario. A radio patrol boat and tugs were going to the rescue.

From Cleveland came the report that the Coast Guard radio station there reported the Coast Guard picket boat C. G. 803 was unaccounted for since 11 a. m., Sunday. A cutter has been dispatched to search for the missing boat. There was no information as to how many men were aboard.

From Vancouver, British Columbia, the Associated Press reported three ships were damaged in a heavy fog. They were the Koryu Maru, a Japanese freighter, which ran ashore, and the passenger steamers Princess Alice of the Canadian Steamship Co. and the Yukon of the Alaska Steamship Co., which collided outside the harbor.

Going Up?

Washington Monument is holding its own as an attraction for visitors to the Capital.

Last month 48,556 persons ascended the obelisk. Of this total, 5,156 stout-legged souls used the staircase, the remaining 43,400 using the elevator.

$11-a-Room Apartments Urged Here

Head of U. S. Employes Asks P. W. A. Advance Funds for Buildings.

Stewart Declares Capital Rents Are Hardship on Workers.

Proposals for construction with public works funds of fireproof Washington apartments to rent at $11 a room were advanced yesterday by Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Steward told a Public Works Administration hearing of the Board of Appeals he was interested in the general need for reduced rents in Washington rather than in any specific project. He emphasized the demand for improvement of living conditions among Government workers.

"Rents have been higher in Washington," he said, "than in any other city in the United States. Reductions in the last two years have been negligible in the majority of cases. Federal employes have found rentals to be heavy drains upon their salaries. Now, with pay cuts and furloughs, the high level of housing costs has been a hardship of the most intense degree.

"These costs have entered largely into the fixed charges in the budgets of Federal employes. With pyramading pay cuts and furloughs the situation has become critical. Something must be done and that quickly."

Rates of $11 a room, Steward declared, would represent marked improvement over the present situation.

"It seems to us," he added, "that the Public Works Administration has an opportunity to lead the way in one of the most important of all modern problems. If the Federal Government grasps its opportunity the ideal of decent housing at moderate costs can be advanced many years."

Central Smashes Way to Title With 13-0 Victory Over Western

Line Plunges Net Champs 2 Goals

Kocsis and Dunlap Buck Ball Over Despite Gallant Stands.

Western's Last-Quarter Threat Checked on 6-Yd. Line by Fumble.

Team Standings.

Tech	3	1	0	.750
Eastern	2	1	1	.666
Western	1	3	0	.250
Roosevelt	0	4	0	.000

SPIRIT and fight bowed before experience and power as 1,200 witnesses, shivering in the icy blasts of Central Stadium, beneath a frowning cold, gray sky, yesterday afternoon, saw Central High punch across the Western goal line two hard-earned touchdowns, to give the Mount Pleasant eleven its first football championship since the fall of 1920. The score was 13 to 0.

With the victory yesterday, Tech tumbled from the supremacy of the local scholastic pigskin realm, and the moth-eaten, cobwebbery banner labeled "1920" will make way for a new "1933' pennon that will mythically flaunt in the breeze o'ver Central High School.

Dunlap Goes Over.

Don Dunlap, Central signal barker, carried the ball across the Western goal line early in the second period, and Frank Kocsis, his full-backing teammate, slashed over the line after being held for three downs, late in the third chapter, to make the score more emphatic. But it took three downs to lug it across.

Practically the entire ball game was played in the Western territory with the Central eleven scoring a grand quota of 15 first downs to Western's 2. And these 10-yard slices were gained late in the fourth period, when the Georgetown entry made its first and last serious threat on the champion's goal. However, a fumble on the 5-yard line by Schneider stymied the possible score.

Dunlap's winning touchdown wallop was delivered after Billy Richardson brought the ball to the Western 42-yard line, running back a Western punt in the second period. A sustained march from this spot moved the ball inside the Georgetown 20. Then Frank Kocsis scooted around left end to the 3-yard line and Dunlap scored on the next play over right tackle.

King's Run Factor.

The other Central score, which was rung up in the late minutes of the third stanza, was brought into point-producing position when King ran from the Western 23-yard line to the Western 1 foot mark, where he was chased out of bounds. Three plays it took before Frank Kocsis smashed through for the tally on a wide right end gallop. Kocsis booted the point after touchdown.

The lone scoring bid of Western came in the middle of the final quarter. Bryant fumbled the ball on the Central 36-yard line and a flock of red-jerseyed Westerners pounced on the leather. A 15-yard penalty on Central for holding moved the ball to the 26-yard line. Jimmy Corcoran zipped a short over-the-line pass to Schneider, who made the Central 8-yard line. Maloney gained to the 6 and then Schneider on attempt to plow over center dropped the ball, Holmes recovering for Central. The Mount Pleasanters kicked out of danger and the ball was scrimmaged between the 40-yard stripes from that time until the end of the game.

Central Opens Drive.

On the opening kick-off, the Central crew started down the field heck bent for election. Kocsis carried the ball from his own 35 to the Western 45-yard line. Then the Central full back unleashed a pass to De Lisio, who sped from the Western 28-yard line to the 16. Kocsis slugged center to the 9 and again to the 8. King lost 2 on the next play, bringing the ball back to the 10-yard line. King made 6 and then Central was caught off side, which returned the ball back to the 9.

Dunlap, on a wide reverse around the right side of the line, fumbled the ball as he was tackled, the leather spinning beyond the end zone for an automatic touchback. Western took the ball on its 20 and kicked out of danger.

Pitt Is Warned Of Nebraska Power

Coach Builds Defense at Ends; News of Other Eastern Squads.

(Associated Press.)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.—Braving snow flurries in Panther Hollow, Pitt's gridiron machine chugged back and forth across the gridiron today in preparation for Nebraska's "big, bad" Cornhuskers.

The Panther intelligence department reported that the men from Lincoln, undefeated champs of the Big Six Conference for 1933, have raised havoc with their flank movements this season. Coach Jock Sutherland took immediate steps to strengthen his wings, shifting Bob Timmons to left end and benching Harvey Rooker.

Sutherland also issued his weekly gloom report, announcing that if the Panthers stop Nebraska they will have to show a better defense than they have to date.

Columbia Stresses Defense.

New York, Nov. 14.—Every member of the Columbia football squad was in uniform today as the Lions went through a long drill devoted mostly to a defense for Lafayette plays, especially passing. Later the Columbia backs and ends worked out on their own aerial game, putting in much time on two new passing plays.

Ithaca, N. Y.—With their departure for Hanover set for Thursday night, Cornell's squad sought to make up for lost practice time with a long workout. Weather conditions were improved, but the field still was soggy from snow and rain. Passing and punting were stressed, after which the Ithacans rehearsed their running attack.

N. Y. U. Given Soft Work.

New York.—Howard Cann, of New York University, is taking no chances with his football Violets, who came through the Fordham game without injury. He gave them a long blackboard drill, warning them Rutgers was going to be "hard to stop," and then sent them through an hour of dummy scrimmage, but no contact work.

Army Is Looking Ahead.

West Point, N. Y.—A heavy snow blanketed the practice field, but Head Coach Gar Davidson nevertheless sent his Army warriors through their first long drive in preparation for the Navy and Notre Dame games. The Cadets hope to be able to take the Penn Military contest this week in stride.

Princeton Varsity Busy.

Princeton, N. J.—Princeton's varsity devoted the major part of the afternoon to polishing up its offense against a dummy defense composed of scrubs. The reserve eleven, meanwhile, engaged the Tiger seconds in a scrimmage during which Les Kaufman, sophomore back, broke loose for two scores, one on a 75-yard run. Dan Hinman, out all season with injuries, will be ready to take over the center job against Navy if needed.

Bowie's 14-Day Meeting Opens Today With Charity Program

RACING returns to Washington's side door today as the Maryland turf season enters its final phase at the Bowie track, situated some 18 miles out the Defense highway. Today and tomorrow are listed as charity days. The regular meeting of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association begins on Friday and ends on Thanksgiving Day. In all, fans are offered 14 days of racing at the nearby plant.

Post time of the first race will be 1 o'clock. Seven races, as usual, will comprise the programs, and track officials have announced that the mutuel "take" will not be increased on the benefit days.

Plant Ready for Business.

Joseph B. Boyle, general manager of the plant, and Thomas K. Lynch, his assistant, have the plant in ship-shape order and want only a break in the weather. Although snow fell early yesterday, it soon melted and harrows were used on the course. Unless there is more precipitation the track, swept by a strong west wind yesterday afternoon, should be near a fast stage when the program opens.

The capacity number of horses now at Bowie is reflected in the heavy entry lists for the first day. Full fields are assured in six races, while The Capital Purse, the day's feature, has drawn a group of eight promising juveniles. An allowance maiden race and five claiming events complete the program.

Today's starts will be made from the new Boyle-Lynch gate instead of the Bahr gate used at Havre de Grace, Laurel and Pimlico. This apparatus is only a slight change from the familiar device, however.

Four stake events will be decided during the meeting, the first of which is the Prince Georges Handicap on Saturday. The following week-end will bring the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial. The Endurance Handicap is scheduled on November 28, with the Thanksgiving Handicap climaxing the meeting.

While Winooka and Trevallion, the Australian stars have been nominated for stakes, it is doubtful whether they will be seen under silks. However, visitors are going to get a peek at Mrs. John Bosley,

Londos Returns to U. S.; Bout Seen by 100,000

New York, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Jim Londos, recognized in some States as world heavyweight wrestling champion, returned today on the Majestic from a three-months' visit to Europe. While visiting his father, Theolphes, in Greece, he engaged in an exhibition bout in the Olympic Stadium at Athens at the request of President Zaimes. More than 100,000 spectators witnessed the bout, Londos said.

Oregon State Sees Victory Over Rams

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Oregon State, the team that started the downfall of Southern California by holding the Trojans to a scoreless tie three weeks ago, stopped off here today en route to New York, where it tangles with Fordham Saturday. The Westerners are confident of victory.

"Fordham is tough, but we think we'll win," said Coach Lon Stiner. "We aren't coming across the continent just for a train ride."

Oregon State has won five games, tied Southern California and Gonzaga and lost to undefeated Oregon last week, 13 to 3.

Stiner said he expected Norman "Red" Franklin, his star half back, to make a strong bid for all-American honors against Fordham. Franklin, he said, was the best back on the Pacific Coast.

"He's fast, a hard runner, can kick and pass, and is a great defensive player," Stiner boasted.

Brundage Not to Seek Reelection by A. A. U.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14 (AP).—Word was received today in amateur athletic circles that Avery Brundage, of Chicago, president of the Amateur Athletic Association of the United States for the past four years, is not a candidate for reelection.

A new president will be named at the annual three-day meeting, which opens next Sunday.

Mentioned prominently for the post are Martin Klein and Maj. Patrick Walsh, of New York; William Kenney, of Boston; Judge Fred Hoffman, of Cincinnati, and A. C. Gilbert, of New Haven.

Miller Outpoints Feldman in Ring

N.B.A. Champ Easy Victor in Nontitle Bout.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Freddy Miller, of Cincinnati, recognized by the National Boxing Association as world's featherweight champion, outpointed Lew Feldman, of Brooklyn, in a nontitle bout at the Ridgewood Grove Arena tonight. Miller weighed 127¾ pounds; Feldman 130½.

Except in the sixth and seventh rounds, Feldman, who once held New York State recognition as world's champion in the same division, was no match for the clever Cincinnati southpaw. There were no knockdowns, but Feldman was cut about the nose and lips and was bleeding freely at the finish.

Miller outsped and outboxed his New York rival in the first five rounds, pounding Feldman about the ribs with a jarring left hook. He slowed down in the sixth and seventh, but resumed control of the situation from the eighth round to the finish. He was punching oftener and much more cleanly than Feldman and there was no doubt as to the merits of the decision he won.

Four 8-Round Fights On Card at Portner's

An "All-star" fight card, featured by four eight-rounders, will be the attraction at Portner's Arena next Tuesday night. Roddy Davis will meet Buck Taylor, Carey Wright will battle Charley Gomer, Joe Foglietto engages Charley Von Reedon and Ken Overlin does battle with Roxy Allen. Allen, a Philadelphian, holds a recent win over Young Terry, Newark, N. J., sensation.

Runyan, With MacFarlane, Wins Golf

Team to Shoot 64-68 in Best Ball Event at Pinehurst.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 14 (AP). Paul Runyan, smallest man in top-flight golf and recent National Capital open winner, and the tall, scholarly looking Willie MacFarlane teamed today to whip par decisively over the long No. 2 course of Pinehurst Country Club and win top money in the pro best-ball event opening the Mid-South Open Golf Tournament.

The little White Plains, N. Y., pro and the big Scot from Tuckahoe, N. Y., scored a sensational 64 this afternoon after a good 68 in the morning for a 36-hole total of 132, 3 strokes better than that of the next best pair, Herman Barron, Portchester, N. Y., and Tom Creavy, Albany, N. Y.

Creavy and Barron were among five teams tied for second place at the halfway mark for the day's play with 68's. In the afternoon they came through with a 67.

Kirkwood, Wood Fail.

Joe Kirkwood, trick-shot star, and Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., led the morning round with a 66, but skidded to 71 in the afternoon for a total of 137. They were nosed out of third place by Julius Ackerbloom, Little Rock, Ark., and Jack Forrester, Hackensack, N. J., who scored 71 and 65 for a total of 136.

Tied with Kirkwood and Wood were two other teams, one made up of Henry Picard, Long-driving charleston (S. C.), pro, and Clarence Owens, Greenville, S. C., and the other of Al Houghton, Washington, and Tony Manero, Greensboro, N. C.

The Picard-Owens and Manero-Houghton combinations both shot 68—69—137. Manero missed a 2-foot putt on the home green which if sunk would have given his team a 68 for the afternoon round.

First place was worth $500 to Runyan and MacFarlane, while Creavy and Barron drew $350 and Ackerbloom and Forrester $250.

Three teams, tying at 137, got $118.65 ecah.

7th G. W. Gridman Has Nose Broken

Plotnicki, New Quarter Back, Is Victim.

Ben Plotnicki, Johnny Baker's successor at quarter back on the George Washington football team, yesterday qualified for the varsity berth with a broken nose received in scrimmage. Plotnicki is the seventh Colonial to suffer such an injury this season. Five back field men and two line men already have damaged schnozzles. "Red" Rathjen, Chris Doose and Don Bomba, lead the list with two each. Doose also suffered a similar injury last season.

Texas League Stands Pat.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 14 (AP). The Texas League, meeting today, voted to continue the Shaughnessy pennant playoff plan for the 1934 season and decided upon the same membership as carried the past season.

Burl Victim Of Peculiar Knockout

Comes Up Fighting, But Dazed, and Milling Is Awarded Bout.

Stopped in 3d Round; Genaro Beats Knowles; Ceasar Victor.

VARIAS MILLING knocked Eddie Burl right out of the local featherweight picture with the most peculiar knockout ever recorded at Portner's in the scheduled 10-round main event last night. The finish came in the third round, after Milling had displayed a clear superiority over the Jacksonville give-and-take artist.

Burl was on the losing end, but the bout had not progressed far enough to give the small crowd any assurance that he was almost a certain loser, when in the third round he received a smashing, straight right-hand to the heart. Apparently oblivious to the blow, which had knockout written all over it, Burl continued to battle for some 10 seconds, then fell face forward, as though in a faint.

Burl Gets Up Fighting.

The Jacksonville slugger reclined face downward for a count of 4, then rose to one knee and commenced shadow boxing with an imaginary opponent. Milling, who had retired to a neutral corner, gazed at his antics in obvious sympathy, and when Burl rose at the count of 8 with his back toward him, he advanced slowly and cautiously, whirled him around—and refused to apply the knockout punch.

His eyes glazed, his knees wobbly, but his fighting heart still intact, Burl crowded toward the Filipino featherweight, still feebly flinging fists. Milling still refused to hit his stricken opponent and Referee Short then did the only humane thing under the circumstances—he raised Milling's hand in a token of victory.

Milling sounded out in the first round, which was even, allowing Burl to land several hard right-hand blows in the clinches for the evident purpose of determining his punching power. In the second round, the Pacific Coast featherweight went to work with a vengeance, beating Burl to the punch, outspeeding him and generally demonstrating a marked superiority.

Genaro Beats Knowles.

Mickey Genaro boxed out a close, and not entirely satisfactory decision over Perry Knowles in the 8-round semifinal. Knowles had a distinct advantage in speed and footwork, but Genaro proved too cagey for him, especially when he crouched, weaved and bobbed—and threw left hooks.

Jacques Renominated U. S. G. A. President

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Herbert Jaques, of Boston, who was elected president of the United States Golf Association last year after the original nominee, Robert M. Cutting, of Chicago, had died, today was renominated for a second term.

The renomination followed a seldom-broken precedent, Jaques' father held the office in 1909 and 1910. Nomination always has been tantamount to election.

The other officers also were renominated, including H. W. Pierce, of Boston, who is filling out the unexpired term of the late Charles H. Sabin, as treasurer.

The full list: President Herbert Jaques, Boston; vice presidents, John G. Jackson and Prescott S. Bush, both of New York; secretary, A. M. Reid, New York; counsel, Livingston Platt, New York.

Tigers at Lakeland.

Lakeland, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—This city today was selected as spring training headquarters for the Detroit American League Club.

A. J. Eagan signed a contract with the city on authority of Frank J. Navin, president of the club, who is in Detroit.

Retains G. U. Post

Underwood & Underwood.

JACK HAGERTY.

New Contract Is Won by Hagerty

G. U. Is Satisfied With Work; N. Y. U. on 1934 Schedule.

THE wolves are howling around the doors of those coaches whose teams have fared none too well on the gridiron this season, but Jack Hagerty, who holds the reins at Georgetown, loser of all but two of its six games, will be resigned when his present contract expires at the end of the season, The Post learned last night.

The Rev. Peter J. Kehoe, faculty director of athletics, last night said that Georgetown was satisfied with Hagerty's work despite the poor showing of the team. Father Kehoe said that it was a foregone conclusion that Hagerty would be resigned, probably for a longer term than the 1-year agreement now in affect, even though the matter would have to be voted on by the athletic committee.

Georgetown vs. N. Y. U.

The Post also learned that Georgetown will meet New York University on the gridiron next season at New York after a lapse of a year. The remainder of the schedule, however, will be comprised of teams more within the Hilltoppers' class.

Negotiations are pending with Richmond University, Roanoke, Loyola of Baltimore, Mount St. Mary's, William and Mary, Manhattan and Western Maryland. Although these games have not been definitely settled, it is believed that only the formal signing of the contracts remains to make them official. The contract for the N. Y. U. game already has been signed.

Tennis Upsets Mark Japanese Title Play

Osaka, Japan, Nov. 14 (AP).—Two little-known university students, today won their way to the final round of the Japanese national tennis championships.

Hideo Nishimura, a student at Keio, defeated the defending title holder and Davis Cup star, Ryosuke Nunoi, 6—8, 7—9, 7—5, 6—2, 6—3, in one semifinal. Jiro Fujikura, who upset the Davis Cup veteran, Jiro Satoh, in the quarter-finals, won his final brackets with a 4—6, 6—2, 6—2, 5—7, 6—2 victory over another Keio student, Jiro Yamagishi. Fujikura is a student at Meiji University.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

OUT on the West Coast they are putting the foot back in football. Ever since Knute Rockne and Gus Dorais came out of South Bend in 1913 to shower West Point with forward passes and open a new avenue to the goal line, the foot has been disappearing from the game until field goals have become as extinct as the hoop skirt and the bustle.

But out on the Coast they still remembered the field goal as a scoring weapon and it was by this method that Southern California accomplished the downfall of Knute Rockne's last great Notre Dame team of 1930, 16 to 13, to ruin Rockne's hopes of another National championship and establish the Trojans at the top of the football heap.

Last Saturday it was Southern California which felt the pain of the field goal weapon as flourished by Stanford, which handed the Trojans their first defeat in three seasons with a pair of placement kicks that proved the winning margin of the 13-7 score.

Frowned On by Rockne.

Rockne, more than any other leader of the coaching fraternity, was probably responsible for the disrepute into which the field goal fell during the last decade. Notre Dame teams within this department's memory never used the field goal as a scoring coup. Rockne was opposed to it, and with such as Rockne preaching such a gospel it is not strange that the field goal became more or less obsolete.

Rockne was frank about the matter. "A good team doesn't need to try a field goal," Rockne use to say. "Any team that gets in scoring territory and can't score is not much of a team. There are plays made to score with, scoring plays, and the coach as a rule is responsible if he doesn't provide his team with these plays."

Perhaps, though, Rockne was forgetting that all coaches were not Rocknes and thus unable to equip their teams with the scoring plays of which Rockne spoke; those cleverly conceived stabs at the tackles and ends which had deception as their keynote and the opposition as their foil.

Rules Body Helped.

Hand in hand with Rockne as the enemy of the field goal was the decision of the rules committee in 1927 which relegated the goal posts 10 yards behind the goal line.

Those extra-ten yards that kickers were forced to negotiate helped to discourage the use of drop kicks and placement kicks. The field goals that formerly were attempted when the attacking team had the ball on the enemy 20-yard line were now, in effect, 40-yard boots, allowing for the 10 yards the kicker was forced to drop back.

Detracted from Dramatics.

That 1927 ruling took something away, too, from the dramatics of the game. The gallant goal-line stands that used to go down in song and story could be no more. For how could a team make a goal-line stand within the very shadows of the goal posts when the goal posts were off the field of play? Even in the lengthening shadows of the fourth quarter, the comforting image of the goal posts would be lacking.

But, apparently, the foot is coming back to football. Those two field goals by Stanford last Saturday may plant the germ of an idea in football coaches at large. I wonder what Charley Brickley thought when the tabulations of last year showed only three drop kicks made by all teams throughout the country during 1932? That used to be one-quarter's work for Brickley.

Near Blizzard Forces Michigan Indoors for Practice for Minnesota Game

Wolverines' News Plays Tried Out

Back Field Which Clicked Against Iowa Used in Drill.

Chicago U. Speeds Work for Illinois; Other Midwest Notes.

(Associated Press.)

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 14.—A near blizzard howled across Ferry Field today, but the Wolverines took to their lair in Yost Fieldhouse, where they went through a rehearsal of new plays to be used against Minnesota Saturday

The same Michigan back field combination that clicked against Iowa Saturday worked behind the line today, with Bill Renner at the quarter back post, Everhardus and Capt. Fay at the halves and Johnny Regeczi at full. Jack Heston and Russ Oliver saw some action at the half and full back positions.

Chicago Practices Attack.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Chicago's varsity, which has gained 750 yards from scrimmage in four Big Ten games this season with the net result of only one touchdown, was busy learning some new touchdown plays today as Coach Clark Shaughnessy speeded drill for the Illinois battle. Ed Collins was back at quarter back and the team ran through several new passing and running formations.

Hard Drill at Indiana.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 14.—Indiana's football varsity got down to hard work today, scrimmaging against a freshman eleven which used Xavier University formations. Bob Jones, at guard, showed best on defense, while Robert Keck, sophomore full back, put some drive in the back field on offense. All players with even slight injuries were excused from the scrimmage.

Purdue Back Field Intact.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 14.—The All-Star Purdue back field worked together in practice today for the first time in two weeks, as the Boilermakers started to build a defense against Iowa's attack. Pardonner was at quarter back and Purvis at right half, while Hecker and Carter shifted between left half and full back positions.

Badgers Stress Passing.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 14.—Wisconsin concentrated on perfecting new pass and running plays today in a long offensive drill for the Ohio State encounter. The Badgers offense looked pretty spotty against the freshmen in scrimmage due mainly to imperfect blocking.

Purple Drills Indoors.

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 14.—It was so cold on Northwestern's practice field today that coach Dick Hanley decided to hold drill in Patten Gymnasium for the rest of the season. The varsity ran through a brisk signal practice as Hanley still searched for a man to handle punts.

Nebraska Regulars Back.

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 14.—Cornhuskers stock was on the upgrade today as a result of improvement in the condition of Meier, regular center, and O'Brien, veteran tackle, and the prospect that they will be in the line-up for Nebraska against Pittsburg next Saturday.

The Huskers spent most of today's practice session in defense against Pitt plays, particularly passes, as reproduced by the freshman eleven.

The Husker party will leave early Thursday for Pittsburg and hope to workout at the Pitt Stadium Friday afternoon.

Golfers to Start Match Play Today

Four Flights for Men, One for Women, in Rock Creek Tourney.

FIRST-ROUND matches in the annual Rock Creek turkey golf tournament will begin today at the hilly Rock Creek course, with Pat Axtell, medalist, meeting Joe Micker in his opening match.

A field of 60 golfers is entered in five flights, with a special flight reserved for women players. All first-round matches must be completed by Sunday. Participants will have until next Wednesday to play their second-round matches, with Saturday, November 25, set as the deadline for the semifinals. The 18-hole finals will be played on Monday, November 27.

A raft of husky turkeys has been corralled by Manager B. Harry Graham as prizes for the triumphant players. Manager Graham, himself, will be shooting for one of the gobblers, since his 77 easily qualified him for the championship division. He meets G. Rogers in his first match.

Axtell shot a 71 to win the medal by 5 shots, with Comedian Nick Altrock and Russell Hoag trailing him. Altrock engages Bob Sibley, and Hoag will battle Arthur Darling.

One of the big favorites in the title fight is John Connelly, Rock Creek Spring champion, who faces the 58-year-old S. C. Wimsatt.

Bobby Bowen, 1932 title holder, is not entered this year.

In the women's flight, Mrs. Florence Godfrey will meet Mrs. Mae Hill and Mrs. E. Moffitt will face Betty Keeler.

It is interesting to note that there is a difference of 62 years in the ages of the youngest and oldest player in the tournament. Little Donald Sullivan, 12, who shot a 99 to make the fourth flight, is the youngest and U. David Seltzer, 74, who scored a fine 89 to land a place in the second flight, is the senior golfer.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

Bowie Race Track, Nov. 15.

It was ten years ago on April Fools' Day that the weatherman shuffled a foot of snow on this course and forced a day's delay in the opening of the meeting. Never before, and not since, has a day of scheduled racing been missed in Maryland. Some 700 traveled to the course and many were disappointed when the announcement that action for the day had been declared off. Bowie needs good weather to keep it out of the "red," and let's hope Bowie gets good weather. Remember, good weather or bad weather, we can play the races and aid Maryland's unemployed all in the same motion today and tomorrow. I want to see you all out in front of the press box. But please don't throw anything. BILL.

First race—Sainted has been close several times and has a field here that he should relish. Looks like the spot for the Whitneyite to earn a set of brackets. White Cloud figures second. Unchanging is far down the also eligible list and is unlikely to start. This is a sleeper.

Second race—We might do worse than have a bet on St. Nick. This is one of the hardest races of the fall season to diagnose. I'll take my chances with Nicky, however. He lacked heart as a 2-year-old, but has a powerful Laurel race and a number of fine trials to his credit now. One Chance should show speed here. Stroll Along for the show.

Third race—Glen Burnie shapes up well among these. I can't get that Laurel race out of my hair. Gave Grand Acre a neat trimming on that occasion. Briar Blue showed improvement after graduating and may be in the money picture.

Fourth race—Black Hand turned in a fine race behind Okapi and De Valera last Saturday. Will be back in his own company today and should win. Grey Glade might bound back into winning form here to the surprise of most fans. Zipalong, in light, will be dangerous.

Fifth race—Don Pedro takes off weight for this and is enthusiastic about the Bowie course. If we can get him to run that race he ran behind Chase Me at Laurel we will cash a bet here. Unencumbered, with three straight wins under the saddle strap, is the one to beat. Chrysostom for the rest.

Sixth race—I'm going to Bright Beauty. Her legs look none too good, but she seems to have plenty of what it takes when in action. She will be running over horses in the stretch. Waterway and Charlie K. for the other awards.

Seventh race—Wishing Star appears to have the edge over this gang. Would appreciate an off-track, but can step along on a fast course.

jr.'s Chase Me, one that has never been defeated since being put to racing and who numbered S. W. Labrot's Trot Avon, looked upon as the best mare in training, among his victims last out.

Chase Me Faces Test.

Chase Me is being pointed for the distance stakes to be run here and there are thousands of close students of racing who say he will take the measure of Mate, Pomposity, Dark Secret and other recognized stars when they collide during the meeting.

Every first-class American rider, and that includes Earl Porter Don Meade, Lee Humphries, Sonny Workman, Alfred Robertson, Allen Tipton, Pete Walls, Jimmy Burke, Johnny Bejshak and Johnny Gilbert, are here to accept mounts. This means that many a great riding duel can be expected during the session.

During the summer, Superintendent Dick Pending increased the free parking space for automobiles on track property so as to permit 10,000 cars to be handled.

Mrs. Gadsden D. Bryan, wife of the late sportsman of that name, and James F. O'Hara, jr., whose dad was part owner of this track, are offering a handsome diamond studded pin made in the form of a jockey's cap and whip to the lad, who handles the winner of the Bryan-O'Hara Memorial race, the outstanding event of the meeting.

Catholic U. Eleven Considered for Post-Season Game in Florida New Year's Day

Miami Seeks Opponent In East

Offer Would Have to Be Acted Upon by Athletic Board.

Holy Cross and Cards Likely to Play Here Next Season.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY has been approached concerning a postseason game with the University of Miami to be played at Coral Gables, Fla., New Year's day as a feature of the annual Festival of Palms, it was learned by The Post last night. Miami played and defeated Manhattan College in a similar game last year.

Coach "Dutch" Bergman said yesterday that Catholic U. had not been made an outright offer to make the trip, but merely had been sounded out by the Florida school. Bergman said he believed that several northern schools were queried concerning the game.

Board's O. K. Necessary.

In the event that C. U. is offered the date, the university athletic board of control would have to sanction the game, and it is not at all certain that permission to make the trip would be forthcoming. In the event, however, that the Cardinals do play, it will make the second Eastern school to play in Florida New Years. St. John's College, of Annapolis, already has accepted a bid to play Rollins College.

Bergman right now is more interested in arranging games for the 1934 schedule. If present plans materialize Holy Cross will come to Washington for a game in early October. Manhattan will be played again at Brooklyn, and it is probable that Western Maryland, Wake Forest and Chattanooga will be retained on the schedule. Bergman will attend a meeting of the coaches, slated to be held in Chicago December 28, 29 and 30, when he will endeavor to arrange games with at least two outstanding elevens. It is not improbable that a major team from the South will be listed by the Brookland school.

Government Loop Plans for Court

Six Teams Will Comprise League This Year.

Officers and team pilots of the Government Basketball League met in the Federal clubhouse last night and drew up initial plans for their third consecutive cage season.

As the meeting was the first gathering of the year, only preliminary business was discussed along with the election of officers.

James Hitchens, Agriculture, was elected president; Vic Gauzza re-elected vice president, and Earl Moser, treasurer.

Six teams will make up the league this year, which will consist of Investigation, Government Printing Office, Agriculture, Farm Credit, Marine Corps and Internal Revenue.

A committee was also appointed to make plans for a dance to be held at the Federal clubhouse, the date of which will be announced later.

Two Prince Georges Teams Are Victorious

Prince Georges County representatives in both the boys' soccer and girls' field ball State-wide competition won opening games in the tourney yesterday.

Maryland Park's soccer team, which won the county championship for the second straight year recently, eliminated Ellicott City, Howard County title holder, 4-0, at Ellicott City. The Parkers gained the whip hand early over the host team. Dominic Palmer and Stanley Birchhead did the scoring, the former counting a two-pointer and the latter two penalty shots.

Mount Rainier girls also downed Ellicott City at field ball, 11-5, at Mount Rainier. Ellicott City scored first, but the Mounts soon gained the lead and at the half were in the van, 7-2. Marion Miller, with 7 points, led the winners' attack. The Mount Rainier team meets Annapolis High, Anne Arundel County champion, in a second-round game next Tuesday at Annapolis. The Annapolis eleven drew a bye in the first round.

Wash. & Lee Prepares For Centre Saturday

Sam Todd, substitute quarter back, left after practice for his home in Lakeland, Fla., where his father is seriously ill.

Arlingtons Want Game.

The Arlington A. C. wants a game on their field Sunday with a 150-pound team. Call Clarendon 1881 or 1490. Jack Hudson is requested to report for practice tomorrow at 7:30 on the Fire Department Field.

THIS FREIGHT DEPOT at Charlotte, N.C., WAS ONCE THE SITE OF THE CONFEDERATE NAVY YARD... ALTHOUGH THE NEAREST PORT WAS 200 MILES AWAY....
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y. 11-15-33

Maintenance of a navy yard 200 miles from the nearest seaport during the late part of the Civil War by the Confederate States was not the gross error that it might appear on the part of the Southern forces.

The navy yard was first maintained at Norfolk for the operation of the Confederate navy, but later in the war when Northern forces threatened the safety of the yard there, the South moved its equipment and machinery from Norfolk to Charlotte to locate it in a safer spot. Safety being the prime consideration of the move, it mattered not so much that Charlotte was 200 miles from the nearest port and more than 100 miles from the nearest river navigation.

Today the spot is occupied by a freight depot in Charlotte, but it is still marked as the old navy yard—on the side of the building is a metal marker, a shield with a design in rope and anchors, and on it are these words: "Confederate States Navy Yard, 1862-1865."

Not exactly fresh, but at the same time well preserved, butter has been found recently in an archeological excavation near Muhlbach, Germany, where it was buried 2,700 years ago. Though the ancient people did not understand their process, nor apparently did they do it intentionally, they sterilized the butter in its container by the fire of a funeral pyre before they buried it with their dead. Thus preserved the butter, which was made from hazel nuts, was found in good condition.

Tomorrow: Nature's streamlining.

Tricky Tulsa Plays Tried On G. W.

Colonials' Cubs Introduce Varsity to Style of Week's Invaders.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S varsity encountered the Colonial Cubs, who were armed with Tulsa battle plans yesterday at Griffith Stadium, and came off a sad second in the ensuing scrap. Wielding the potent Tulsa plays which the varsity faces here Friday night the Frosh routed their older brethren, and then added insult to injury by holding the varsity within the confining bounds of its own 15-yard line when it took possession of the leather.

One formation in particular worried the harrassed varsity men. On this play one of the ends moves over to the sideline and a half back assumes a similar post at the opposite side of the field. The half back moves up on the line of scrimmage, and the end drops back far enough to be in the back field, technically speaking. Thus, the tackle on the end's side of the line is eligible to receive a pass, and Tulsa usually passes.

On another play, the receiver takes the ball and hot foots it down field toward his own goal. This move usually brings the majority of his surprised opponents chasing after him. When 30 or 40 yards back of the line of scrimmage, the runner turns and heaves a pass to one of his own men who waits at the line of scrimmage.

Tulsa always reminds G. W. of a magicians' convention. For three years now the Golden Hurricane has been trimming the Colonials with its bewildering assortment of passes, spinners and line bucks, and G. W. doesn't seem able to do anything about it.

One play George Washington will be a long time forgetting occurred two years ago with Tulsa backed up on its own goal line and the fourth down coming up. Frank Greeme, who is winding up his career this season, dropped back in punt formation. The ball was snapped and G. W. linemen came tearing in to block Greeme's kick as he started to punt. Suddenly he turned, flipped an easy pass to Bill Boehm on the 10-yard line, and Boehm raced the remaining 90 yards for a touchdown.

This year Tulsa has a play it refers to as the "jig-saw puzzle." Not even "Gloomy Gus" Henderson can clearly explain how it works, but he expects the boys to use it to good advantage against the Colonials.

"Zuzu" Stewart and "Tuffy" Leemans will be back in the line-up this week, and Jack Morrison will be able to play if needed. Coach Pixlee plans to use Stewart, Hickman, the Parrish brothers and Ed Clark as much as possible, for all played against the Westerners last year and will have some ideas as to what is coming.

Mercury and Palace Elevens Meet Sunday

Mercury A. C., in preparation for its game with the Palace A. C. Sunday at Gonzaga Field, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Mercury billiard parlor for a skull practice. Assistant Manager Len Tippett requests all players to be on time.

Mercury plans to use George Joseph, Jake Lewis, Fats Webb and Richard Healey in the back field. In the line, the team will probably start the game with G. Limerick and Lucky Regan, ends; Dutch Kurtz and Ackelano, tackles; Bumps Tippett and Mothershead, guards, and Howard, center.

Navy Students Not to See Princeton

Exams to Keep Middies at Home; Miller Aims for Speedy Attack.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 14 (Spl.).—Whatever hope the student body of midshipmen entertained as to a possible relaxation of academic regulations by which they would be permitted to attend the Navy-Princeton grid game in Palmer Stadium Saturday was dispelled today in a formal notice issued by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent of the academy.

Admiral Hart issued a formal notice directing attention to an agreement made last February on this point. The departure from custom, he said, was necessary because, among other reasons, the date of this year's game falls during a vital midterm examination at the academy. The regiment will, of course, attend the Army game at Philadelphia the following Saturday.

Indicating that there will be no particular let-up in preparation for the struggle with the Tigers, notwithstanding the nearness of the all-important test with the West Pointers, Head Coach Rip Miller this afternoon drove his Middie proteges through a bristling scrimmage session against the shock troops of squad B, during which all of the players who are likely to swing into action in either combat were given a thorough workout.

Brush Up on Attack.

From now on the mentors plan to concentrate on developing greater speed and coordination in the team's offense. The players have shown little or nothing in running attack in recent games, and naturally there must be decided improvement, to hope for victory over either the Tiger or Mule. The defense of the team has not been such a great source of worry, but this department too will receive a deal of attention, particularly to cope with the style of attack employed by the forthcoming foes.

Spirit Pleases G. U. Grid Coach

Carnegie Due Surprise, Says Hagerty; Stanley Cheers Squad.

GEORGETOWN will match Carnegie Tech in weight when they clash Saturday at Griffith Stadium, and right there the comparison ends. Carnegie will more than match Georgetown in experience, reserve strength and power, and that's all a team needs to have on its rival to win the ball game.

Wintry winds were sweeping over the Hilltop yesterday as the Georgetown squad scampered up and down the field, working on the formations that will be employed against Tech. It was cold and the ground was soggy in spots from the morning's melted snow, but the players didn't seem to mind. They worked as though preparing for the game that would clutch their claim to the national championship. There wasn't the slightest indication that G. U. is getting itself in shape to take another trouncing.

Hagerty Optimistic.

"The boys seem to have the proper spirit for the first time this season," Coach Hagerty said yesterday, "and although Tech may beat us, it's going to know it has been in a football game. It's funny how everybody is picking 'em to beat us by seven or eight touchdowns. Well, we may have a few surprises for Harpster and his team."

Mack Stanley's return to the line-up has heartened Hagerty and bolstered the spirit of the team. Stanley is the only reliable punter in camp and can be used to good advantage. He probably will replace Joe Meglin, who did the kicking against William and Mary.

Carnegie's record for the year indicates the power of the Plaid. A 17-7 defeat by Purdue, and scoreless ties with Washington and Jefferson and Michigan State are its only blotches.

Virginia Eleven Driven Indoors by Cold Wind

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 14 (AP).—Chilling winds that made ball handling difficult forced Virginia to shorten the outdoor drill and seek shelter in Memorial Gymnasium today.

While on the field, the varsity concentrated on the defense, using the plays executed by the reserve eleven drilled in Tech plays. Inside the varsity took the offense, running through the play routine with Gene Munger, Fred Fryberger and Buckey Harris in the back field.

Boys' Club Wants Game.

Line-up Shifts Are Made at Maryland

Buscher, Fullback, Will Call Signals; Nelson Remains at Quarter.

WITH the opportunity of winning its first game in seven weeks looming invitingly on the horizon, Maryland's victory-starved eleven is working overtime this week in an effort to be at the top of their form for Saturday's clash with Johns Hopkins at Baltimore. Maryland is a slight favorite over the Medicos.

While the Old Liners are confident of trouncing the Blujays, Leroy Mackert, who scouted them, feels that the Terps will have a tough afternoon of it and is loath to predict the outcome of the fray. Hopkins has an ace in Henry Beeler, half back, an all-around good performer.

Don Kelly, Bill McLean and Johnny Weeks, Beeler's running mates, round out the Bluejay back field, which Mackert believes is better balanced and packs more punch than does Maryland's. It also will outweigh the Terp ball carriers.

Maryland coaches shuffled the deck yesterday and drew a revised back field that will find Bucky Buscher calling the signals from the full back post. Dick Nelson will continue to play quarter, and with no mental worries it is hoped he will go better.

Willis Benner or Joe Crecca will be assigned to one of the half back positions, and Earl Widmyer will get the other. The coaches believe this new arrangement will give the team a punch that has been missing in all previous games.

The line will be the same that started against Duke with the exception of Johnny Simpson, whose wrenched elbow will keep him on the sidelines for the remainder of the season. Tom Webb, center, is nursing an injured knee, but will be able to play.

Maryland's line, particularly Lew Ennis, the left end, looked good against the heavier and more experienced Duke forward wall last Saturday, and the coaches fully expect it to outplay Hopkins' linemen this week-end. Ennis, a sophomore, has all the requisites of a good wing man. Big, fast afoot, and a deadly tackler, he has yet to be outplayed by an opponent.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

THE Columbians and Beeques asked no quarter in their race for leadership of the Washington Ladies League on the Columbia drives last night, both teams winning all three games for a deadlock at the top, with 17 wins and but 4 losses each. Rena Levy kept the Columbians in the running, mauling the ducks for a high 361 set, while Roberts (Barristers), shared individual honors with a 140 game. The El Gees, who are but one game behind the leaders, took team honors with a 555 game and 1,670 set.

One reason why the Highway Engineers team is setting the pace in the Columbia Heights League at the Arcadia Alleys is Red Rhodes. Rhodes scattered the maples last night for a 158 game and a 415 set. Ouncie Harrison (Arcadia), rolled a 427 set to aid his team in carrying away the total pin fall honors with a 1,788 set. Highway Engineers bagged a 616 game, high for the night.

Andy Gardiner (Amity No. 1), who smashed the high individual set record in the Odd Fellows League at Convention Hall, came through again last night, capturing high individual game with 136. Kittering (Columbia) took high set with 342, being instrumental in Columbia having the best team effort, with 570 game and 1,579 set.

Aided by the pin busting of Ray Eichhorn and Solly Rosenblatt, the Claims team of the Veteran's Bureau League carried away all the honors at the Convention Hall alleys. Eichhorn rolled a 133 game and Rosenblatt, a bowler of no mean ability, turned in a 360 set. Claims team game of 568 and team set of 1,670 was unsurpassed.

Van Horn, rolling with the R's in the Post Office Department League at the Columbia drives, gave an exhibition of pin busting to the tune of a high 157 game, breaking the existing individual game record and ending up with a 364 set for the best individual effort of the night. The O's carried away team honors, rolling a 580 game and total pinfall of 1,606.

Tom Powell led the Columbia Wall Paper team with a 141 game and 387 set to assist in sweeping its match with Takoma Post Office in the Takoma Business Men's League at Takoma last night. Adams-Burch Co. took the odd game from Old Colony.

Incarnation was the outstanding team in the Ladies Lutheran League at Arcadia, capturing high team game with 501 and high team set of 1432, aided by the excellent bowling of Mrs. Martha Kauffman who rolled a 123 game and a 343 set.

J. W. Lindberg (Georgetown) mauled the pins for a 151 game, and Doc Morrisette (St. Paul No. 1) rolled a 381 set to lead the list of individual feats in the Men's Lutheran League. Georgetown's 597 and St. Paul's No. 1 with a 1685 set were the best team efforts.

West, Nativity star, was the big gun in the Holy Name Section C League at Georgetown, scattering the ducks for a 145 game, a season record for the league. J. Ford (Holy Comforter) shared individual honors with a 366 set, high for the night. Nativity's 579 and 1,637 was the best team effort.

Washington Centennial, which is tied with New Jerusalem for the lead in the Masonic League, took the team honors at the Convention Hall alleys, rolling a 586 game and 1,687 set. Lehman (Singleton) had high game of the night with 149, and Dutch Oeser (Potomac) and Charlie Walson (Washington Centennial) tied for individual set honors with 372.

Board of Tax Appeals No. 1, maintained its lead at the top of the Internal Revenue Ladies League at the Columbia Alleys, aided by a 499 game, high for the night. Special Advisory Committee had a total pinfall of 1,438. Clara Parsons' 120 game and Vivian Nolan's 314 set were the best individual efforts.

Heffner and Rittenhouse, Presbyterian No. 2 stars, led the list of individual feats in the Takoma Church League, at Takoma Alleys, with a 142 game and 367 set, respectively. Catholic Missions took two from Lady of Sorrows, Presbyterian No. 1 won the odd game from Baptist Christian, Trinity Men's Club won two from Lutherans and Presbyterian No. 2 won two from Trinity.

Jack Gooding just outnosed Ouncie Harrison in the sweepstakes at the Arcadia drives for an entry in the Dixie Sweepstakes, winning the event with a 407 set, while Ouncie was just four pins less with 403. Charlie Bernhardt was third, with 392, and Ed Blakeney ran fourth, with a 382 set.

Sonnenberg Is Recognized By Curley Government in Exchange for Trade Pact

Wins Approval as Great Mat Artist in Treaty With Promoter.

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (Spl.).—One is surprised and cheered to learn that Gus Sonnenberg, the first of the college football players to win any of the various heavyweight wrestling championships, is now a member of the Jack Curley herd and will meet and, of course, lose to Mr. Curley's current champion, Jim Browning, next week in New York.

Surprised, because one distinctly remembers Mr. Curley's saying, and with a quiver of scorn in his voice, too, at the time when Sonnenberg held his title, that this Sonnenberg could not wrestle any, whatever, and did not deserve as much as a quarter-hour's work in the first preliminary of a midweek program in a suburban armory.

And one is cheered naturally to hear of Sonnenberg's return, because it was only a short time ago that Sonnenberg was reported to be dying of some dreadful malady which Mr. Curley diagnosed in his own simple language as a case of where a guy don't feel good. Sonnenberg felt awful all over, Mr. Curley said, and though he never had seen the time when he could wrestle any whatever, he was now in such a state that he could not wrestle half as well as that any more.

Now a Great Artist.

But now Sonnenberg seems miraculously to feel very good and to have become a great artist in his profession because, otherwise, one feels certain Mr. Curley, as promoter, would not present him to his patrons in a bout involving the highest titular bauble, as it is called.

Mr. Curley and the others, who scoffed at Sonnenberg's naive style a few years back, are late to make amends to a young man who has been a benefactor of the business. It was Sonnenberg who elevated wrestling and made a very popular and profitable public entertainment of a momotonous and boresome kind of physical labor.

Until Sonnenberg came along, not long out of Dartmouth College and the University of Detroit, at both of which institutions he had played football, wrestling was conventional and consisted of two big, moist bodies entwined upon a mat, pulling one another by the foot or squeezing one another around the head until the eyes and tongue bulged out.

But nothing ever happened in those conventional wrestling bouts and Sonnenberg brought something new and beautiful into the profession when he charges across the ring and with a wild plunge, buried his head celar up to the ears in the flabby billows of Strangler Ed Lewis' middle.

Sonnenberg in Demand.

This knocked the Strangler down, winded and chocking, and Sonnenberg found himself in great demand hither and yon in the U. S. A. and Canada.

The customers wished to watch him bury his head in other flabby middles and he made much money for a long time.

It can be granted that Mr. Sonnenberg can not wrestle now and never could, but now that he has made his peace with Mr. Curley and joined the big herd it can serve no good purpose to dwell on that. Wrestlers have not wrestled much anyway since they discovered that the customers greatly preferred the butt, the kick in the abdomen as practiced by Joe Savoldi, late of Notre Dame, and the swan-dive as discoursed at great personal risk by several daring performers who plunge through the ropes and go skating on their skulls across the concrete floors.

Among the artists who will perform for Mr. Curley next in support of Sonnenberg's frolic with Jim Browning, who is going to win, of course, and keep the title, is an interesting character known as Man Mountain Dean, who has had a gay career to date and gets more mischievous as he goes along.

Man Mountain Dean is a Georgian at the present writing, and the Governor of Georgia, Mr. Talmadge, has expressed a desire to see him squeeze Savoldi on Monday evening. He wears a deep tangle of whiskers and sometimes huffs like the big, bad wolf, when wrestling. But Mr. Dean was not alway Dean. In a previous life, he was Soldier Leavit, of the A. E. F. Later he was a policeman in Miami with a prosperous beat in that part of town which embraced the shore where the boats came in from Bimini with stimulants. And presently, apparently just as the prank of a little boy who never will grow up, he decided to grow whiskers and become Man Mountain Dean, the wrestler. He wrestles all right, too, and his whiskers have a strong customer appeal, which shows how little it takes sometimes to attract the patrons.

Fraters Hosts To Mohawks Sunday

Alexandrians, With Hurt Players Back, Look for Victory.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 14 (Spl.).—The Fraters will work out today, tomorrow and Friday nights in preparation for Sunday's game with the Mohawk A. C. of Washington. When the Mohawks step on the gridiron in Baggett's Stadium it will be the first time they have played in Alexandria since 1924, when they were victorious over the Virginia A. C.

Two weeks ago, the Fraters fell before the Hawks at Griffith Stadium, but weer handicapped because four of their star players, McMenamin, Goodwin, West and Haywood, were out of the line-up. Coach Dreifus is confident that his warriors will defeat the invaders Sunday.

Last week-end the Fraters successfuly defended their independent State championship by a 6-0 victory over the Clancy A. C. at Norfolk, Va.

Pirates Practice.

Mike Goldman, coach of the Pirate A. C., has issued a call that all players report at Hayden's Field at 7:30 p. m. The Sea Dogs are casting about for a game Sunday, to be played at Alexandria, the Pirates having the use of Hayden's Field this week-end.

Wilson Sinclair, manager of the Virginia, A. C., has signed Ellett Cabell and Julian Whitestone to coach his team for the remainder of the season. They will succeed Ralph O'Neil, who has resigned because of business conflictions.

The Columbia Engine Co. held a basketball meeting last night at the fire house. The following players attended: Billy and Hugh Traverse, former Alexandria High School stars; Hardy Gensmer and Ellett Cabell, Old Dominion Boat Club, Jack Moore, captain elect of Alexandria High School, who did not return to school this year; G. Zimmerman, Lester McMenamin, and "Bussy" Brenner. Brenner coached the firemen last year and turned out a formidable aggregation.

Passers Likely To Join New Grid Loop

Plans for American Pro Football League Now Being Discussed.

WASHINGTON may have a berth in the newly proposed American football league, which will be patterned after the National professional loop.

According to reports emanating from Charlotte, N. C., and announcements from S. A. Godman, owner of the Memphis Tigers, a pioneer in Southern professional football activities, the league may become an actuality by the first of the year. All that remains is a meeting of the representatives of interested cities to form such a curcuit.

As outlined, the project has the active support of St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Jacksonville, Atlanta, New Orleans, Nashville, Birmingham, Winston-Salem, Chattanooga and Tulsa, as well as other cities in the South and Midwest.

Passers May Enter.

That Washington will be offered a franchise in the league, there seems no doubt, with the Washington Passers the ultimate choice as the Capital representative.

A. G. Dezendorf, owner of the local club, is enthusiastic over the plans of such a league, and he intimated last night that such an organization will meet with his decided support and backing. Dezendorf will accompany his club to Charlotte Sunday, where it is scheduled to meet the Bantams in a game.

At that time he will confer with S. A. Godman and other parties, who are laying the groundwork for the installation, which, at present, looks like a probability.

Stocks Droop Fraction After Early Rallies

Sinking Dollar Reflected in Dealing; Sales Rise to 2,169,310 Shares.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Foreign exchanges provided the excitement in financial markets today.

The decreased gold value of dollars, as measured both by the R. F. C.'s daily purchasing price and the level assigned by European currencies—the latter was the lower of the two—gave speculative markets something to shoot at, but the response of stocks and several commodities was not especially emphatic. Stocks closed lower after forenoon firmness.

Sterling raced up 18 cents to $5.34; it then slipped several cents from this new postwar peak. Demand for pounds was apparently lively most of the day.

Funds Go to Europe.

How large a volume of funds was being shifted to London became a subject of guesses, although no serious attempts were made to estimate the amount. Some observers thought the "flight" might be exaggerated, feeling that exchange fluctuations did not accurately reflect the situation. It was generally admitted, however, that London was currently the focal point for foreign capital.

From the action of other markets the deduction could be made that funds were going into foreign currencies, or their equivalents, rather than into equities or staples. Stocks' best effort was an early rise of around 1 to 2 points for the general list, a few specially favored issues bettering the upper limit of that range. However, trading turned dull before noon and when the pound began to go down stock exchange prices reacted, bringing a moderately lower close on a turnover of 2,169,310 shares.

Francs Reach High.

When French francs were at their high of 6.48 cents, the dollar's indicated gold value was approximately 60½ cents, whereas on the basis of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's posted gold price of $33.56, up 11 cents from Monday, it was 61.59 cents.

Industrial stocks fared better than rails or utilities during the late reaction after leading the early rise, and their net changes were largely fractional. U. S. Steel and U. S. Smelting were off about a point, General Electric, American Smelting, Case, General Motors and Kennecott eased, while chemical stocks and a sprinkling of miscellaneous listings finished rather firmly. Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, North American Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, American Telephone and Baltimore & Ohio lost around half a point to 2½. Alcohols came under late pressure, National Distillers falling 5.

Reluctance of shares to match dollar depreciation seemed to reflect the unwillingness of traders to attempt much "discounting" of possible developments. Many were wondering at what point the British equalization fund might be used to check sterling's rise, others did not like the action of Government bonds, and the financial community in general hoped for official light on monetary perplexities.

"As Sound as a Dollar"

Is Time to Forget This Adage And Realize What Is Happening

By Ralph West Robey.

It is extraordinary how the public maintains its belief that nothing really bad will be done about our currency. Apparently the old adage "as sound as a dollar" has a hold on our thinking that virtually is impossible to kill. Every time anything happens that by any stretch of the imagination can be interpreted as indicating a trend toward soundness it is so viewed, while anything that unmistakably is a move in the opposite direction is waved aside as an innocuous compromise and actually not at all an indication that such a course will be pursued.

It is time, it seems to me, for us to get out of this state of mind and arouse ourselves to a realization of what is going on. This country today is headed straight into paper money and unless we stop giving those in charge of our monetary policy the benefits of all doubts, we shall wake up one of these days and find the printing presses have been started.

In taking such a view the farthest thing from my mind is to be an alarmist. I do not believe for a moment that we need end with printing-press money. There are powerful forces pushing us in this direction, but they are not irresistible forces. Quite the contrary, they are forces that could be arrested with ease if properly attacked, for their strength is based upon ignorance and misunderstanding. Unless they are opposed—unless we recognize their existence and stop letting our case rest simply on the long, honorable record of the dollar—they, nevertheless, unquestionably will carry us over the brink of monetary disaster.

Must Abandon Belief Administration Wants Sound Money.

The first step in this direction is to stop, assuming that the Administration wants, or is fighting for sound money. The latest example of such an assumption was contained in the interpretation carried in the news dispatches of the significance of the conference of monetary advisers with the President Sunday afternoon. This interpretation was that the meeting indicated the Administration was questioning the success of the current gold buying program and gradually would veer back toward sound money. Numerous other examples will occur to any one who reviews the newspaper accounts of this and that action by the Administration in the last few months

Consider for a moment, however, just why we should accept such interpretations that the Administration is fighting inflation? What basis do we have for believing that the President wants to return to recognized monetary principles in case the current gold-buying program does not succeed in raising prices? Upon what grounds should we conclude that the failure of this policy will not lead him to take even more drastic currency steps in order to attain his objective and fulfill his promise for higher prices? Where is there a single shred of positive evidence, such as a statement of the President as contrasted with vague interpretations, that the Administration is not perfectly willing to turn to the printing presses if all other attempts to raise prices fail?

Answer to These Questions Found in Recent Records.

In answering these questions think back over the record of the last eight or nine months. Without attempting to be complete, the following stand out as various of the high spots:

The elimination of all practical checks to the currency issue powers of the Federal Reserve System through making it possible to issue Federal Reserve notes against almost any kind of assets.

The making of all kinds of paper money legal tender for the payment of debts.

The suspension of the gold standard in the face of a larger metallic reserve than any other nation has ever possessed.

The repudiation of the gold clause in all obligations.

The imposition of penalties upon the holding of gold or gold certificates.

The establishment of an extraordinary budget for covering up the lack of balance between receipts and expenditures of the Federal Government.

Passage of the Thomas amendment giving the President the authority to manipulate the dollar more or less at his will.

The adoption of a policy deliberately designed to undermine the value of the dollar.

The extension of this policy to foreign fields in order to make its depreciating effects more visible to a trusting public.

The elimination of practically all "sound-money" men from the council advising on monetary policies.

The incessant thinking up of ways by which more and more money may be pumped into circulation through Government expenditures and loans.

Unfortunately there is nothing official with which to offset this record pointing to inflation. All we have are the newspaper interpretations from time to time to the effect that it is hoped in Administration circles that the Thomas amendment powers will not have to be used. What has taken place behind the scene we have no way of knowing. Perhaps the President has fought inflation vigorously in private conferences. It still remains a fact, however, that in so far as the public can judge from his official statements and acts, he has not opposed inflation.

Through this negative attitude the President has encouraged the inflationists. They have become incredibly bold in their demands and threats of what will happen if the Administration does not follow their advice. Today, they are more firmly in the saddle than at any time since March 4. Unless they are unseated, and unseated soon, it seems to me inevitable that they will drive us farther and farther along the road of currency experiments with the result that ultimately the use of the printing presses will become unavoidable.

Liquidation Forces Bonds To Low Level

Loans Suffer From Drop in Dollar Rates; Sales, $19,783,000.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Renewed liquidation of United States Government securities unsettled the bond market today, and most categories finished with a heavy tone despite some mild last-hour recoveries.

Loans of all classes apparently were depressed by another sharp decline in international dollar rates. The American unit, in terms of gold, was valued at one time at only a little above 60 cents, its lowest level in the past 60 years or more.

The soaring of the British pound to another postwar peak at $5.34 was attributed by foreign exchange circles partly to the continued transfer of capital from the United States and France to London. Another raise in the domestic gold price of 11 cents an ounce to $33.56 also was seen as a contributing factor.

U. S. List Active.

The activity in the Federal list was the most pronounced since 1924, total transfers reaching nearly $9,000,000, against some $5,800,000 yesterday when some support appeared for the sliding governments.

While most of this section closed above the lows for the day, losses ranged from 2-32 to 20-32 of a point. The largest turnover was in the new 4¼-3¼s, some $4,500,000 of these changing hands at a decline of 8-32 of a point.

In the corporation sector, utilities were under the most pressure. Columbia Gas issues were off more than 4 points, and those of North American, North American Edison, Consolidated Gas, Pacific Gas and a number of others were down fractionally to around 2 points. Several loans were either around or under their previous lows for the year.

The industrials showed some resistance, but there were a few heavy losers in this class. Armour & Co. 4½s slumped 4, and issues of American I. G. Chemical, American Cyanamid, Liggett & Myers, Midvale Steel, McKesson, United Drug and Warner Bros. sagged 1 to 2 or more.

Stock Sales Boom In Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The Buenos Aires stock exchange experienced its heaviest trading in years today, mainly on the strength of the government's plan of converting more than 300,000,000 pesos in 6 per cent internal bonds into a 5 per cent issue.

The conversion appeared so sure of success that the market rose rapidly, and National Mortgage Bank 6 per cents rose 7 points, touching par for the first time in 10 years, in belief that a similar conversion was imminent. Provincial and municipal obligations shared in the general rise.

Applications for conversion of the internal 6 per cents totaled 350,000,000 pesos, which is 26 per cent of the total internal debt. The conversion will save the government millions of pesos in interest payments annually.

Cotton's Jump Of $1 Reduced In Late Selling

December Closes at 10.02 as General Market Rises 12 to 16 Points.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—An early advance of more than $1 a bale in cotton today was followed by partial reactions under realizing and scattered selling.

December contracts after selling up to 10.12 closed at 10.02, with the general market ending steady at net advances of 12 to 16 points.

Initial prices were 8 to 12 points higher on an active trade and commission house demand stimulated by relatively steady Liverpool cables, the further advance in the domestic gold price and weakness of the dollar in the foreign exchange markets.

Modern Southern Sales.

There was moderate Southern selling, some further December liquidation and realizing, but offerings were readily absorbed by a broadening demand. Spot houses were buyers of December, while commission houses were buyers of the late months.

After selling 21 to 24 points net higher, with all positions making new high ground for the movement, offerings increased and prices reacted moderately.

The Census Bureau report showing domestic consumption of 503,873 bales for October compared with 499,486 for September, and 501,893 for October last year was not far out of line with expectations. Exports today 42,271, making 2,841,448 so far this season. Port receipts, 60,045. U. S. port stocks, 3,996,182.

Building Code Fight Carried To Miss Perkins

Labor Threatens to Carry Supremacy Issue to Roosevelt.

Dissatisfied with NRA treatment of its objections to the proposed construction code, the American Federation of Labor yesterday appealed to Secretary of Labor Perkins in an effort to sidetrack the pact.

After the session with the Secretary, M. J. McDonough, president of the A. F. of L. building trades department, brought the Cabinet officer into the row over the code by declaring "we have reason to believe she is by no means unsympathetic with our views," and threatened to carry his difficulties to President Roosevelt.

The fight, heretofore cloaked in the umorage of words, meanwhile narrowed down to a struggle between industry and labor for supremacy, McDonough characterizing the code as a weapon of the Construction League of America "to crush labor," and Carlton S. Proctor, chairman of the publicity committee of the league, which is sponsoring the agreement with the indorsement of certain NRA officials, characterizing the A. F. of L.'s opposition as revealing "its most destructively impudent demand for control of the construction industry, which, if acceded to, must inevitably crush the entire NRA structure."

Lower Wages Asked.

Hitting at the labor lines from another angle, the governing board of the Associated General Contractors of America, which is aligned with the league, adopted resolutions appealing for "more economic wage scales by the Public Works Administration" and for immediate approval of the Construction League code.

The A. F. of L., charging the NRA "discriminated" against it by scrapping a code of which it approved, is demanding a separate code for the building industry and minimum pay scales based on union and Public Works Administration wages for skilled and unskilled labor. The Construction League is seeking a single construction code and a simple minimum wage of 40 cents an hour for unskilled labor with collective bargaining agreements for other wages to be reached by regional boards.

Coming to McDonough's assistance, William Green, president of the labor federation, declared the Construction League's statements as "additional evidence in support of the charge I made recently that powerful interests are seeking to discredit the recovery act.

Strike Threats Denied.

Charges from the league that the A. F. of L. has threatened to call a Nation-wide strike if the code is approved were declared by Green to be "false accusations made for the purpose of creating a false issue."

The A. F. of L., he added, is not blocking the NRA, but is "seeking to block abuse of the recovery act, and it will carry opposition to the last appeal."

The entire battle will be dumped into the lap of Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson when he arrives from his speaking tour today. Gen. Johnson, who has described the code as a "hot one," in that it is controversial, is expected to order a new hearing on labor's objections.

"The construction league talks much about a unified industry," McDonough said. "It talks about means of eliminating the abuses that have grown up in it. That is a camouflage statement. If the league would content itself with eliminating abuses, labor would stand with it 100 per cent. But the league merely is eliminating some abuses and under cover of a pious plea is seeking to eliminate labor as far as rights and voice are concerned."

A scale of wages for skilled labor must be written into any code, he declared, characterizing the league code as "preposterous," an "outrage" which will be opposed until the "preposterous and intolerable provisions are removed."

Misstatement Charged.

Proctor, league spokesman, described the McDonough statement as an "eleventh hour blast" that has not "the slightest regard for truth." In an effort to prove misstatement, he pointed out that McDonough asserted the code called for a 49-hour week and an unskilled rate of pay on 86 per cent of the industry's workers, while in reality, he said, the agreement provides for a 40-hour week and collective bargaining.

Maryland to Help Dig Shore Channel

State's $500,000 Pooled With Federal Fund.

The War Department told the Associated Press yesterday that $281,000 allotted by the Public Works Administration to the improvement of Ocean City Harbor, Md., including a channel to Sinepuxent Bay extending to Cincoteague Bay, would be pooled with $500,000 provided by the State of Maryland.

The work proposed, the department said, will consist in dredging 1,143,000 cubic yards of materials to provide a channel 5 feet deep and 150 feet wide from a point in Sinepuxent Bay east of Osborne Windmill to Green Point, and a channel 5 feet deep and 100 feet wide from Green Point to the 5-foot contour in Chincoteague Bay.

The department said the contractor would be required to complete the project within 11½ working months.

rld Labor tches NRA, ton Asserts

e Official Declares . S. Far Ahead of Other Nations.

The future of labor legislation in every civilized country is staked upon the potency of America's NRA to end unemployment, Harold B. Butler, director of the League of Nations International Labor Office, said yesterday.

In Washington for conferences with President Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes and other officials, Mr. Butler said this country is far ahead of other nations in improved labor conditions. World labor, he declared, is looking to the NRA experiment here to raise wages and limit hours universally.

"The 40-hour week is here. That's something we have been talking about for two years. It exists in not so much as a single industry elsewhere, though it is in effect in a few plants," he asserted.

The labor office director is British. During the World War he was undersecretary in the ministry of labor. He was secretary general of the first International Labor Conference held here in 1919.

Next May each member of the League of Nations will send four delegates, two representing member governments, one representing industry and the fourth, labor, to another international labor conclave from which work-improving agreements have come in the past.

A dinner honoring Mr. Butler was tendered by Secretary Perkins yesterday at the Cosmos Club. Other guests included Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, and Leifer Magnussen, American representative at the International Labor Office.

Strike Halts Deliveries Of Pittsburgh Packers

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14 (AP).—The "carry" system was put into effect by retail meat dealers today as packing houses ceased all deliveries because of a general strike of workers.

The strike, which began last Saturday, appeared virtually complete. More than 1,000 meat handlers are idle. They demand increased wages and shorter hours.

Radio Waves and Ripples

OUR lesson this morning is in cooperation.

We begin by telling you that N. B. C. and Columbia have decided to cooperate in picking up President Roosevelt from the Georgia Bicentennial celebration at Savannah Saturday.

And we can't help feeling a flare of lucidity burst about us when we relate that wire charges from the Georgia town to New York are very heavy, indeed; too heavy to be borne by one network when they can be shared with another by the simple process of cooperation.

So you see what a fine thing this cooperation really is and why everyone should hurry over to the Commerce building and sign a code. Or come up and see us sometime.

A neutral announcer, Lamdin Kay, of Atlanta's WSB, will handle the broadcast into New York, being very careful all the while to say nothing that possibly could be construed as a plug for either chain. Columbia and National will insert their own announcements and distribute the one-hour program, 10 to 11 a. m., to their affiliated stations from New York.

Whitecaps.

WRC—"Radio and Medicine," address by Dr. Maurice Fishbein, editor American Medical Association Journal, 1:15 p. m.; Folk Song Festival Alliance, a concert of old folk tunes, N. B. C. celebration broadcast, 3:30 p. m.; Waltz Time, Tenor Frank Munn and Abe Lyman's Orchestra, 8:30 p. m.

WMAL—"Obsession," a play by Dulcima Gladsby, considered one of ten best dramatic pieces ever produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation, another Radio City opening week feature, 3 p. m.; John McCormack, "Smilin' Kitty O'Day," Tschaikowsky's "None but the Lonely Heart," Somervell's "Loveliest of Trees," Parry's "There" and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," 9:30 p. m.; Paul Whiteman and Orchestra, 11:31 p. m.

WJSV—Violinist Albert Spaulding in a recital that includes "Alabama," a tone poem of his own composition, 8:30 p. m.; Parade of Champions, Morton Downey singing "You're My Past, Present and Future," "Dear Little Boy of Mine" and "The Day You Came Along," 9:15 p. m.; Guy Lombardo, broadcasting from the Capital, Burns and Allen, from Hollywood, 9:30 p. m.

WOL—Homer Rodeheaver, singing evangelist, 4:30 p. m.; Dorothy Paul, pianist, 6:45 p. m.; Allen Ensemble, 8:45 p. m.

A new "network" was born yesterday.

And WOL undertakes a 17-hour operation once more.

WOL and stations in New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Camden and Baltimore have banded together a program-service corporation, a cooperative enterprise whereby each member will select the best from its local-talent shows for distribution to the others. This set-up is to be bolstered by special programs to come from New York and Philadelphio, mostly dance-band broadcasts.

A program clearing house is to be set up in Philadelphia where each day's broadcast schedule will be arranged. Broadcasting on the "network" will be continuous, each station throwing a switch or two when it decides it wants some of it. WOL, however, has no intention of discontinuing its broadcasting of phonograph records in the morning.

"Our listeners won't stand for it," President Leroy Mark explained. "They'd rather hear records than some live talent."

One way of breaking into radio is to hang around the studios during lunch hour and try to be helpful to the engineers.

That's how Harvey Townsend, WRC's "Singing Reporter," got his start.

It requires, of course, the rarely combined faculties of helping and keeping out of every one's way. One can't be too particular about eating, either. But food was a small item with Townsend those days.

Tenor Charles Luke and Announcer Jim McGrath would be very hurt if you suspected them of ad libbing those Tuesday morning broadcasts on WRC. They've been leaving the studio feeling very original and spontaneous.

N. B. C.'s mail indicates that its broadcasting of high school football games was enjoyed most by people who have never seen football, or anything else, and probably never will. The blind, we mean. A letter written for one man said he understood the play better than most spectators.

American Federation of Labor President William Green broadcasts "Labor's Tribute to Radio," from WMAL at 10:30 o'clock Friday night. Not to be confused with Willie Green's Hay Shakers, a hillbilly troupe, immediately following.

Columbia, apparently, means to make the best of its decision to limit all repeal advertising to wines and beers. Frederick C. Lloyd, British wine connoisseur, discussing correct uses of wine, is a WJSV broadcast at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Of the 90 or so lady announcers WJSV has auditioned, only two have been asked to come back for another hearing. The minds had hoped to do better than that.

"Uncle Jenks Lends a Helping Hand" will be a WJSV Players presentation tomorrow night at 10:45. It's about the trials and tribulations of eloping, and probably shouldn't have been mentioned at all.

Another instance of what is being done to sugar-coat radio campaigns for charity funds comes over WJSV waves tonight, "Rainbow and the Valley," a Red Cross Roll Call play written by W. F. Hepner and microphoning Lilla LaGarde, Mrs. Anthony Hyde, Ida Clagett, Philip Wyatt, Harold Long and Walter Studdiford.

This is the day for most of the radio-equipped nations to put on a tributary broadcast for N. B. C.'s Radio City.

The list for the day follows:

Russia, 12:45 p. m.—Symphony orchestra of All-Union Broadcasting Committee, Orlov conducting.

Italy, 2:30 p. m.—Symphony orchestra, direction Caperana; soloist and chorus from Rome.

Canada, 3 p. m.—Orchestra and soloist from Toronto.

Germany, 4 p. m.—Berlin Symphony Orchestra, Otto Frickhoeiffer conducting.

British Broadcasting Corp., 4:30 p. m.—Symphony orchestra, Felix Weingarten conducting, military band, male chorus.

One can put one's finger almost anywhere on an N. B. C. program schedule and find a Radio City opening week broadcast. We think it might not be too bad if one put one's finger on the 6 p. m. spot today and tuned in WEAF for a concert of sacred music by the combined choirs of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and St. Thomas and Grace churches.

Columbia has switched its cast line-up for the Elmer Everett Yess script series. John Eldredge will be heard in the title role, Ray Collins as Jones and Gloria Holden as Miss Jones, the love interest. It seems public reception of the series hasn't been all that its best friends expected.

Effective Wednesday, November 22, Fred Waring will have to struggle along without the services of Moran and Mack, "Two Black Crows."

Say the Columbia publicity writers:

"The all-Waring cycle not only is in line with the sponsor's policy of periodically changing the set-up, but was arranged in accord with press comments and listeners' letters from all sections of the country."

Arduously and long, Ronald Dawson hunts work for his Northern Dramatic Co., radio play producers.

As a favor to a neighborhood-threater-owning friend in Baltimore he staged several acts the other night.

Another theater manager heard and saw them, drew up a contract which Dawson signed.

Love duets are the business of Katherine Carrington and Milton Watson, of musical comedy experience, in Columbia's "Evening in Paris" presentations.

Distillers Confer Here With Dealers

Substantial progress toward amicable settlement of controversies between distillers and wholesale liquor dealers was made at a conference at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

The conference followed the rehabilitation earlier in the day of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association.

Distillers at the conference were: C. B. Baker, of the C. B. Baker Co. and the Medicinal Distilling Co., of Baltimore; Lewis Rosenstiel, chairman of the Board of Schenle Products; R. E. Wathen, of American Medicinal Spirits and National Distillers; and James Campbell, of Louisville, representing the Glenmore Distilling Co., of Owensboro.

Inquest Holds Mate in Death Of Mrs. Bishop

Wife's Threats of Suicide Alleged at Hearing by Coroner.

Despite the testimony of a number of witnesses that Mrs. Nellie E. Bishop, 33, had threatened suicide several times, a coroner's jury yesterday ordered her husband held for a grand jury hearing in her death.

Earl E. Bishop, 32, gas station manager, of 21-A Bates street northwest, testified that his wife shot herself early Sunday morning after he returned from a party.

Bishop said that when he came home, his wife struck him several times and forced him against a glass door which shattered. She seemed to become quieted, but as he turned, she picked up a revolver and shouted, "It's loaded," Bishop added.

Mrs. Theresa Schmidt, of 136 Q street northwest, who was staying with the Bishops, testified she heard Bishop scream, "Oh, Helen, Helen, don't do it." Her 10-year-old son, Billy Schmidt, offered similar testimony.

Davis Asserts War Talk Less

U. S. Ambassador at Large Here for Conference With President.

Home again to express first-hand convictions on the European disarmament situation to President Roosevelt and the State Department, Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis yesterday declared recent war talk abroad has diminished under the force of public sentiment.

He reiterated his belief the Geneva Disarmament Conference is by no means dead, adding that its future will be determined by public opinion. In this regard he gave the opinion Sunday's German plebiscite, which overwhelmingly indorsed the Hitler policies, would have no effect on Germany's attitude.

Conrad Nagel Note Has Kidnap Threat

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 14 (AP). Police here have a note demanding $50,000 from Conrad Nagel, motion picture star, under a kidnap threat, and today are searching for a youth to get an explanation.

Police said a youth, 19, who told hospital authorities he was Harry Zeriger, of New York City, was found lying near a highway north of Fredericksburg, November 4. He was unconscious from a blow on his head.

After he left the hospital, a note addressed to the actor demanding the money and threatening kidnaping, was found in the hospital room. A subsequent search has not revealed his whereabouts.

Nazi Demand Splits Church

Crucifix Abolition Seen as Official Move Toward Reorganization.

Berlin, Nov. 14 (AP).—A schism among German Protestants was feared in high church circles tonight as a result of the suspension of three pastors and the declaration of a Nazi German Christian leader that the crucifix will disappear from German Protestant churches.

The Revs. Martin Niemaeller and E. F. Rabernau were suspended for "offering resistance to the National Socialists and the German Christian spirit regarding the necessary reconstruction of the German Evangelical Church." Last Saturday the suspension order was revoked.

Mr. Niemaeller went to Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller and demanded the Rev. Joaquim Hossenfelder, president of the Nazi German Christian movement, and all members of the supreme church council who attended a meeting at the Sports Palace last night be removed from office.

It was at that meeting that Dr. Reinhold Krause, chief of the Berlin section of the Nazi German Christians, declared that:

"The crucifix is to be discarded. Everything that sprang from the alien spirit must be removed from the German people's church—be it ever so old and apparently venerable."

Poll for Close Of Farm Strike

First Wisconsin Returns Favor End, But New Trend Expected.

Milwaukee, Nov. 14 (AP).—First official tabulation of votes in the post card poll of Wisconsin farmers showed 534 opposing continuation of the farm strike and 510 favoring it, headquarters of the Farm Holiday Association and the Wisconsin Co-operative Milk Pool at Madison announced tonight.

Walter M. Singler, milk pool president, said relatively few ballots, however, had reached headquarters and he believed additional returns would show a decided trend toward continuing the strike.

A community Law and Order League was organized today at Canby, Minn., by about 700 persons, mostly farmers, opposed to the farm strike. The group adopted a resolution expressing necessity for higher prices, but insisting that order must be maintained.

St. Paul, Nov. 14 (AP).—Minnesota farm holiday leaders tonight voted to continue their marketing strike with increased picketing, but ordered a partial lifting of marketing restrictions on cream and butter.

Jefferson League Reelects McClellan

Also Pledges Support to Sewer Bond Issue.

The Jefferson Civic League at its meeting last night reelected as its president J. C. McClellan. Other officers elected are W. K. MacMahan, first vice president; Mrs. Alice Semones, second vice president; Miss Ruth Richart, secretary; Charles T. Thorpe, treasurer.

Delegates to the Arlington County Civic Federation are A. D. Davis, G. O. Basham and Roy Miller; alternates, Clyde M. Mills, W. Glenn Bixler and W. K. MacMahon.

The organization pledged its support at the polls on next Tuesday to the proposed sewer bond issue.

Youth Jailed in Theft Of Uncle's Life Savings

Los Angeles, Nov. 14 (AP).—Charged with stealing $6,000 from his uncle's strong box in Beaver, Pa., Russell J. Hall, 19, was arrested today when he visited his mother, Lillian Clark, divorcee.

Police were informed the youth on October 20 told his uncle he wanted to go to the World's Fair at Chicago. Next day the uncle heard Russell had bought an automobile for cash. Looking in his strong box, containing his life savings, the uncle found it empty, police here were informed.

Sunday Movies Will Be Asked In Montgomery

County Theaters in Move to Meet Competition of Neighbors.

Legislation permitting Sunday moving pictures in Montgomery County will be introduced at the special session of the Maryland Assembly next week, county Democratic leaders announced yesterday.

County motion picture theaters have been complaining for some time that their business is injured by the open theaters in Washington and Prince Georges County while they must remain closed because of the antiquated blue laws.

A bill was introduced at the last session which would have provided Sunday movies, but was lost in the Senate. It is considered probable the present bill will be enacted without opposition.

The only county delegate to oppose the bill in the last session was Odorion Roby. Walter W. Dawson, Republican delegate, voted for the bill and is expected to approve the present one.

The bill will permit Sunday movies in the metropolitan area, which is composed mainly of urban School Grant Discussed.

Discussion of the grant of $160,000 from the Public Works Administration for Montgomery County school building featured the meeting of the county board of education yesterday.

A letter from the State engineer for the Public Works Administration in Baltimore said the grant had been made and advised that a grant contract would have to be negotiated, through the attorney to the board directly with the Washington office.

The board understands that conditions under which the Government will make the grant are contained in the grant contract and will give the items in the cost of the buildings for which the Government will contribute.

Detailed analysis costs of the proposed buildings was ordered by the board to determine the additional amount the county must provide since the Federal grant was reduced.

The board received a request from the mayor and council of Rockville that any proposed new building for a Rockville colored school be erected on a new site. The present site is inadequate for enlargement, the council said.

Bulldog Forfeits Life For Feud With Goat

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—Eugene Lake, Loch Raven farmer, today killed his pet English bulldog to save the life of his goat.

Lake was milking when he heard a commotion in his barn. Investigating, he found the dog, which long had held a grudge against the goat, with a death grip on his enemy's throat. The farmer had his hand cut in a futile effort to part the two, then he shot the dog.

Decision Delayed In Trial of Duke

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Whether the Duke of Atholl's mystery fund was illegal or a loophole in England's 270-year-old lottery laws remained a mystery tonight after a hearing in the Bow street police court, where the magistrate reserved judgment on the grounds that he needed time to write the important decision.

The duke, one of the leading figures of the British peerage, rested his case on a plea of not guilty and his attorney, Norman Birkett, said the defense would call no witnesses.

The decision is expected in about two weeks.

The 66-year-old defendant was accused of violating the lotteries act in connection with his scheme to save for British hospitals a part of the money that goes annually to the Irish Sweepstakes.

"Cap" Stubbs — Madame Myrteel — By Edwina

Walt Mason, Himself

Kitchener.

I always honored Kitchener, my hero. long was he, the man who found his sepulcher deep in a northern sea. It seemed indeed a frightful thing that in a passing breath great Kitchener would take a swing from life and fame to death. That he should die before he knew the outcome of the fray and gain the honors that were due, but it seems best today. He still believed himself a chief, a master of his trade, his laurels, showing in relief, had not begun to fade. Now all the ministers in sight, the generals and crooks, have settled in their chairs to write about a million books. They disagree on many things, with statements fierce and bold; some criticize the tinhorn kings that other books uphold; and while their wranglings have some charms, in one thing they concur, which is, of all the false alarms, the worst was Kitchener. He pulled a thousand bonehead breaks and pulled them once again, and so the busy writers swat and take their hefty sling. I'm glad that Kitchener can't read these bales of priceless junk; that somewhere in the ocean weed his hero bones are sunk.

Another Public Preview at RKO-Keith's Tomorrow Night at 8—"Road" Suicide

A New Harding Picture to Be GivenPremiere

Nils Asther Costarred in "Right to Romance;" Theater News.

With apparently unswerving fidelity to its obvious determination never to inaugurate its new bills on the same day two weeks in succession, RKO-Keith's Theater announces—with some pride that it can think up so many combinations out of a week that contains only seven days—that "The Right to Romance," the new RKO-Radio vehicle for the co-stellar talents of Ann Harding and Nils Asther, will be given its world premiere on Fifteenth street at a special public preview tomorrow evening at 8.

"The Right to Romance," it might be interesting to know, is the picture that was originally celebrated as "Beautiful" and was written by Myles Connolly especially for Miss Harding.

RKO-Radio having discovered through the medium of "Double Harness," in which William Powell shared honors with Miss Harding—and probably remembering the success achieved by Miss Harding and Leslie Howard in "The Animal Kingdom"—have sought to insure a continuance of this co-stellar box-office popularity of its placid blonde star by teaming her again, this time with the suave and continental Mr. Asther, last seen on the Keith screen with Barbara Stanwyck in "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," which he stole stock, lock and barrel.

Mr. Asther In Doubt.

In this subject, Miss Harding is reported to appear in the role of a distinguished plastic surgeon. Since his face seems to stand in no need whatever of being knocked down and reassembled, it is not clear in the absence of more explicit information concerning the picture precisely what function in it Mr. Asther is supposed to perform. Something sinister and subtle, no doubt, since it is in that sort of enterprise that he is at his best.

These two, however, are not the only members of the cast who might be entitled to a meed of public interest and popular acclaim. One becomes appraised, through a little harmless snooping, that Robert Young, who did rather well for himself and all concerned with Marie Dressler and Wally Berry in "Tugboat Annie," and Sari Maritza, one of the more engaging of the cinema's comparatively recent importations, both are assigned to important chores and that Irving Pichel, Helen Freeman and Alden Chase—whoever he or she may be—also are among those present.

It is worth noting that the last projection of Constance Bennett's "After Tonight" will begin Thursday at 6:03 p. m., and that those, who are in the house at the time—if any—when the world premiere of "The Right to Romance" begins will be privileged to remain through without additional tribute at the box-office, thus being given the advantage, if that is what it is, of four hours continuous screen-gazing for the price of two.

Another bit of idle maundering from the RKO-Keith sector is to the effect that Walt Disney's classic short reel, "Three Little Pigs," best of the Silly Symphonies, is to be brought back once more for the delectation of those who may not have seen it at all, or, if there be none such, for the benefit of that vastly greater number who will be happy at the chance to see it for the fifth or sixth time—an enthusiastic majority that includes this column. The date of the rebooking of "Three Little Pigs" in a downtown first-run theater is November 22.

Who's Afraid of Goblin King?

Washington youngsters had best sing, if they would heed the advice of Curdie, the miner's son. "For," says Curdie, "Goblins can't bear singing. They can't sing themselves. They have no more voice than a cow. And they don't like other people to sing!" So Curdie and the Princess sing their way to safety and to sunlight again, out of the dark underground kingdom of the goblins.

Remembering this, there is no need to be afraid of the otherwise terrifying Goblin King in "Curdie, the Princess and the Goblin," when the Children's Theater of New York brings this George MacDonald children's classic to life on the stage of the National Theater the morning of November 25.

This will be the second offering of the season of Children's plays which are given under the auspices of the Women's International League, but will be played by an entirely different company from the one which inaugurated the season last month with the "Five Little Peppers."

Steady and Rapid Growth.

It is interesting to note in these years of depression and lean days of the legitimate stage that the Children's Theater of New York, organized by Clare Tree Major ten years ago to produce plays exclusively for children in New York, has grown until today it has three companies of professionals, whose tour embraces over 100 cities in the United States and Canada.

Prominent in the cast of "Curdie" are Roland Hogue, the Goblin King; Paul Jones, remembered, perhaps, by the older generation in support of Eva Le Gallienne in "The Swan," and in the Theater Guild's productions of "Caesar and Cleopatra" and "The Great God Brown," and Mary Farren, the Princess, with Townsend Muddell as Curdie.

Speaking of Nils Asther, as we assuredly were somewhere back there, his present earnings, in case that has been what you have been worrying about, are not subject to a $1,830 debt incurred by his former wife, Vivian Duncan, prior to their marriage, a Los Angeles municipal judge has just ruled, inasmuch as a property settlement was made when the marriage was dissolved last year. The judge refused to grant judgment for the amount against Asther in payment for the education in a military academy of the actress' nephew, Donald Duncan. Vivian Duncan, it will be recalled, is one of the Duncan Sisters—the Eva of the two—recently seen at Loew's Fox in an abridged version of their famous stage success, "Topsy and Eva."

Dogs in the Mangers.

Katherine Cornell, or so a vagrant note shapes itself considerably to this column's chagrin, will traverse the entire State of Montana without playing a single city in the State. It had been her fond hope and rather definite expectation to present Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" in Billings, Butte, Helena, Great Falls and Missoula, but being movie-minded and of a distinctly dog—not Flush — in the manger frame of mind toward the project, none of the theaters in those cities would open its doors to her.

Nor is she able to appear in Spokane, Wash., for the same reason.

Further than that, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska now are presenting comparable booking problems. So far her dates in these States have been secured only in Wichita, Emporia and Des Moines.

It is beginning to appear that if the "road" is dead in some parts of the country, it is because it has committed suicide!

It is now entirely clear why Mayor-elect Fiorello LaGuardia of New York City is taking that water trip to Panama. It is palpably a bit of clever camouflage to mask a retributive junket to the West Coast and the films capital in Hollywood. For Mr. LaGuardia has only recently joined the ranks of unsuccessful screen authors. His scenario, "Dirty Politics," was rejected by a motion picture company and returned to him with the notation that the company's production program for the coming year had already been planned. The scenario, so the company's editorial department reports, was submitted more than a month ago. Perhaps, if he should send it back now——

The Birth of a Band.

When Guy Lombardo was a small boy in London, Ontario, and his father sent him trudging truculently to his first violin lesson, the outcome, of course, could not be foreseen.

In the ensuing years, Guy enrolled three younger brothers and several school friends as his musical disciples. The Lombardo boys—Guy, Carmen, Liebert and Victor—gave the home town a new kind of music.

Their first appearance was at the Mothers' Club in London, an event linked in later years with their musical entry into New York. Guy then was 12 years old and the year was 1918. He played the violin, young Freddy Freitzer pounded the piano, Carmen tooted the flute, and little Liebert set up a jazzy pandemonium with an old kettle and drums purchased for the occasion.

The Kreitzer and Lombardo families barely survived the rehearsals!

"Discovered" Music.

At an early age, Guy rebelled against the "hot" type of jazz, and groped around for a tempo and style which pleased him. Unaware at the time of its full value, he stumbled across the soft, legato treatment and tempo which won his band its laurels years later.

Cooperating as old friends and resourceful musicians, the Royal Canadians today are at the peak in popular music. They have advanced to increasing favor through their weekly programs over the Columbia network, and through countless engagements in vaudeville, hotels and favorite summer spots for revellers.

If you have not already heard them at the Earle Theater, where they are currently headlining the stage bill, by all means do so at once and reaccustom your ear to the gentle cadences of some real music—not too heavy, but none the less genuine.

With Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt occupying the Presidential box, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducting, this afternoon at 4:40 o'clock, will be heard in a concert which, after a lapse of a dozen years, renews its Washington concert series. During that interval of twelve years, the Boston Symphony has been heard here, from time to time, in single appearances, but not in a series. This afternoon's program will be the first of a series of three presented in Constitution Hall, under the management of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, in deference to a predetermined popular demand.

Suiting the Action to the Word!

Blonde Ann Harding and brunette Nils Asther seem to have taken seriously the title of their new picture, "The Right to Romance," next attraction at RKO-Keith's. "The Right to Romance," by the way, will open—slightly off schedule—with another special public preview tomorrow night at 8.

"Favorite Son."

Having paid tribute to the popularity of a "favorite son" by attending last night's last performance at Loew's Fox Theater almost 200 strong, the Montana State Society of Washington tonight will further honor John Fogarty, the Montanan Irish tenor, featured on this week's stage bill at the Fox, by banqueting him at the Hotel Hamilton.

One of the most popular of the prevalent radio artists, Fogarty's Washington engagement has been thickly punctuated with social attentions, many of which have had their inception in the enthusiasm of his State-society for the Fogarty voice, an enthusiasm that is shared by only 47 other States in the Union!

Diagnosis.

From the Pittsburgh reports of her performance in "A Trip to Pressburg," it would appear that what the defaulting Miss Negri really is suffering from is a severe attack of fallen archness!

Blind to Hear Opening Opera As Post Guests

500 Seats Are Reserved for Group and Their Attendants.

Nearly 300 of Washington's blind are to be guests of the Washington Post and the International Opera Company on the opening night of the Capital's popular grand opera week Sunday.

Seats for 500 persons, enough to seat the blind and their attendants, were reserved yesterday by Maurice Frank, opera company director, for the performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" for which several of the organization's leading singers, including Emila Vergeri and Giiuseppe Martino-Rossi, have been cast.

Ralph Campbell, of the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, will arrange transportation to and from the theater.

Continued heavy sale of The Post half-price seats for all operas was reported by officials of the company yesterday.

A copy of The Post identifies a purchaser as a reader and entitles him to a half-price seat. Choice seats of The Post's block are available for most of the operas. Tickets are on sale at the Stieff piano store, 1340 G street northwest.

"Huck" Finn Comes to Life For Portrait

Post's Calendar Artist Finds Francis Fairall Excellent Model.

The living personification of Huckleberry Finn, possibly Mark Twain's best-known character, has been found in Washington. He is Francis Fairall, 14, of 212 Third street northeast. He is a Washington Post carrier boy and his portrait in full color will be the subject of The Post's annual calendar for 1934.

To interpret the spirit of boyhood in tribute to its hundreds of carriers The Post selected the character of Huckleberry Finn as most appropriate and engaged Charles Dunn, well-known Washington portrait painter, to make a full-length oil portrait with a Post carrier boy as model. Mr. Dunn's search for his model ended abruptly when Fairall appeared at his studio with a group of other carriers.

Garbed in the traditional overalls, supported by a single length of twine, barefoot and with an unruly lock of brown hair showing beneath the brim of a nondescript hat, Francis immediately becomes the "Huckleberry Finn" who has been known and loved by generations.

In many respects Francis' experiences have paralleled the experiences of Tom Sawyer's boon companion. Although born in Washington and a pupil at the Peabody school, he has spent most of his life on the outskirts of Sandy Spring, Md. Like "Huckleberry Finn" he is a firm believer in the efficiancy of mystic incantations as a cure for warts that are, of course, caused by handling toads. On the other hand, he confesses at least two discrepancies. He will not admit playing "hookey" at least more than once, and he says he never has any luck fishing, whereas the original "Huck" Finn knew all the best fishing holes.

Francis has read the story of "Huckleberry Finn" four times and now, while playing the part, he says that he is reading it again. He is familiar with Tom Sawyer's method of inducing other boys to do such chores as whitewashing fences. There is one job, however, that Francis would never trust to hands other than his own. That is the delivery of The Washington Post along the B street northwest route between Second and Eighth streets.

"Huckleberry Finn" on Canvas

Charles Dunn, Washington portrait artist, begins work on the life-size oil painting of "Huckleberry Finn," posed by Francis Fairall, Post carrier boy. The finished portrait will be reproduced in full color on The Post annual calendars for 1934.
